III. Development Office Update

Chairman von Lehe called on Vice President for Development Jancy Houck for a report on improvements in the University’s development program that had been made following conclusion of the Carolina’s Promise Campaign in preparation for the University’s next fund-raising campaign.

Building on the success of the University’s capital campaign, Ms. Houck said an important post-campaign activity had been to make improvements in the University’s development program. At today’s Board meeting, she wanted to update Trustees on efforts to make permanent improvements in the University’s development program.

Improvement of constituent data is the top priority, which meant that database deficiencies had to be corrected. The best way to accomplish this is conversion to a Constituent Relationship Management (CRM) system for use by the offices of development, alumni relations, advocacy, marketing and communications. Such a system would update the Development Office’s existing outdated system, which was installed in 2000. CRM will offer a single database that consolidates constituent data from multiple sources, generates and records constituent communications and interactions, automates targeted marketing, communications and select solicitations, generates leads for engagement and fund raising, and enables creation of detailed analytics.

To fund the CRM database, Ms. Houck said current one-time funds would be used. However, recurring funds would be necessary for staffing the system. The solution for recurring funding was through gift assessment, an approach commonly used among universities around the country, including institutions in the Southeastern Conference, Clemson University, North Carolina State University, University of Virginia, Yale University, and others. Assessments range from 2.5% to 15% at the universities surveyed.

Ms. Houck described a 3% gift assessment formula that would be allocated for central development and would provide recurring funds to allow the hiring of needed staff for CRM database conversion, training and ongoing use. She clarified for Trustees that some personnel would be temporary and some permanent. She estimated the assessment would yield $450,000 in funding for Fiscal Year 2017, noting that the assessment would be applied to restricted and unrestricted spendable gifts and pledge payments.

More specifically, she said, the assessment would not be applied to gifts designated for endowment, single gifts to fully fund a construction or renovation project or equipment, deferred gifts not yet realized, gifts in-kind, real estate gifts, or sponsored awards generated by faculty. The assessment would be applied to realized bequests and other deferred gifts as received for current use, foundation grants as allowed by the donor and corporate current use gifts.

The use of the funds generated from the assessment would be fully budgeted and accountable, with reporting available to administrative and academic partners as to how the funds were used. Ms. Houck said communication and education efforts have been underway to make various campus constituents aware of the plan. Donors would learn of the plan on the website as well as in one-on-one discussions with development staff.

In response to questions from Trustees, Ms. Houck said initial discussions with a potential donor would identify for the donor that 3% of their gift would assessed. Trustees expressed concern over what would take place if the donor disagreed with the assessment. Trustee Whittle asked that the Board be provided information about the ratio of dollars spent to dollars raised and how the University compared to best practices in fund raising as identified at universities around the country. He also asked for a budget and pro forma for the funds to be generated from the assessment. “What is the return on the money being spent?” he asked. During the campaign, Ms. Houck said the cost per dollar raised was about 14 cents.

President Pastides noted that the only other way to fund Development’s operation was through the Board-approved budget, but that no one wanted to use student tuition to pay these costs. Most donors will understand a fee associated with a gift, which is not an uncommon practice, he said. “In the (University’s) next campaign, we won’t be successful without increasing the budget in Development and the only way to do it is to either recover some of that funding from our friends and donors or ask the Board to increase Development’s budget at the expense of something else.”

Chairman von Lehe said that Ms. Houck’s report was received as information and that she would be bringing additional information back to the Board.

IV. Palmetto College Update

Chairman von Lehe called on Chancellor Elkins to report on three items from Palmetto College. First, she said that USC Sumter would be strengthening its athletics programs by adding women’s golf and bringing back men’s soccer for 2017-2018. Second, she said for 2017-2018, USC Union would join the other three Palmetto College campuses in the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) Division I with baseball, softball and men’s and women’s soccer, which previously had only been club sports on that campus.

Finally, Chancellor Elkins said the Palmetto College online bachelor’s degree completion program, which now has over 600 graduates, will launch new television commercials in January 2017. She previewed the commercials for Trustees after recognizing Palmetto College’s Director of Marketing and Communications Jay Darby, USC’s Chief Communications Officer Wes Hickman and his team who were involved in creation of the commercials, as well as to the production company (Dust of the Ground), led by USC alumni.

V. Report of the Alumni Association

Chairman von Lehe announced Mr. Preston had provided a written report for Trustees. The report was distributed to those at the table and placed on the Board Portal.

VI. Report of the President

Chairman von Lehe called on President Pastides who said that in the interest of time he would cede his report and invite someone special to speak to the Board instead.

The achievement tower at Capstone was lit recently in recognition of the University’s and the state’s newest Rhodes Scholar Jory Fleming, President Pastides said, asking Jory with his service dog, Daisy, to the lectern to speak. He noted that Jory, one of 32 Rhodes Scholars nationwide; is a Capstone Fellow, with a double-major in geography and marine science and a minor in geophysics. “He is a most impressive student and is the 11th Rhodes Scholar from the University of South Carolina, including one from USC Upstate.”

Jory Fleming thanked the Board and said he wanted to share some of what USC had meant to him and to offer an indication of how the University had prepared him to go to Oxford. He said his first interaction with the University came as a high school student because he was home schooled and took dual enrollment classes at both USC Sumter and USC Columbia. He said how impressed he was when, as a high school senior, he met with Dr. Jean Ellis to determine a major. She became his academic advisor and later his research mentor. “I was struck right away by how she took over an hour of her time, with me coming in unannounced, to prepare me for what I wanted to major in,” he said.

He noted her continued support and the support of other faculty members as well. He cited Dr. Joe Jones’ classes and mentorship and how Dr. Jones accompanied him to California for a conference providing medical support so Jory could attend and present his work.

I wanted to first give you an indication of where I am today as a result of the faculty members that have supported me, they are not just teachers to me but they are mentors and I think that is part of what has made my journey here very special. Another thing that has made my journey here very remarkable is the things that I’ve become invested in here and have cared about have been able to be changed by me as an individual.

He specifically cited Cocky’s Reading Express, which taught him the difference that one student can make in the community.

My interactions with that program (Cocky’s Reading Express) have both challenged me and helped me grow in a way that I wouldn’t have expected.
The University also has helped me so much just in terms of actually being able to go to college. I have a number of disabilities, which limits my everyday life in a number of ways. That is actually the reason I got Daisy. Without her, I wouldn’t be able to attend school. The University has become better connected to PAALS, which is Daisy’s service dog trainer.

He cited other volunteer activities that have grown from his involvement on campus, stating,

So, it has been remarkable to me how my involvement on this campus has inspired other students, some of whom I don’t know, to train and assist people like me with disabilities. I want to thank the community for that.

Finally, I wanted to thank various offices on campus that have helped me grow and given me a chance. One of my disabilities is autism, which limits my ability to interact with others and be in social environments in a way that most people would have no difficulties with. My junior year I got involved with being a University 101 Peer Leader, which is the class that a lot of freshmen take here. That role is almost all facilitation; interaction with others. U101 gave me a chance and helped me to grow in so many ways. I actually came back this year to serve as a Senior Peer Leader. Without the support of those faculty members, without the support of those students, and without the support of campus offices, I really wouldn’t be where I am today. Autism is something that is a natural barrier to reaching out and to getting involved. But, as a result of Daisy, as a result of all of those groups, I have become better invested here in the University and it has meant so much to me.

I read recently a poem by William Wordsworth that I thought adequately summed up where I was at the beginning and the end of my college experience here at USC. So the first stanza is I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;

If you could have seen me four years ago, I would have been very different than I appear to you now. As a home schooler, I did have an opportunity to reach out to the community to some extent, but I was isolated like that cloud in some measure. The last stanza of that poem, Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

The image of dancing with the flowers really hit me because that is sort of the image that I see myself now. I am no longer a lonely cloud floating in the breeze, I have become part of something here at USC that has prepared me to go to Oxford.

Jory said he is excited to pursue a master’s degree in geography at Oxford “in order to become more connected to the world so that I can better help the world in the many issues that it faces. I hope I have given you a brief indication of how USC has helped prepare me to do that.”

On behalf of the Board of Trustees, Chairman von Lehe congratulated Jory and presented Daisy with a new dog collar with the USC logo.

VII. Other Matters
