PROGRAM

30th Annual Conference on The First-Year Experience®

www.sc.edu/fye
Dear Conference Delegates,

The staff of the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition at the University of South Carolina is delighted that you chose to join us as we celebrate 30 years of the Annual Conference on The First-Year Experience. Along with our co-hosting institutions, Bainbridge College, Georgia Institute of Technology, Kennesaw State University, and the University of Georgia, we welcome you to Atlanta, Georgia for this anniversary conference. Whether you are a first-time attendee or have attended all 30 of our annual meetings, we are confident that you will find your time at this conference both enjoyable and productive.

We take great pride in hosting educationally productive and personally inspiring conferences that create a community among delegates, presenters, exhibitors, and hosts during the event and serve as a rich professional network long beyond our time together at the conference. The staff of the National Resource Center has planned an outstanding program of pre-conference workshops, featured speakers, and conference sessions as well as included some featured events and activities to pay homage to the significant milestone of our 30th anniversary meeting. While learning from these educational sessions is valuable to our work, the conference schedule also is designed to facilitate informal interactions among participants. In fact, one of the foundational values of the Center’s 30 annual conferences has been the importance of fostering professional connections and facilitating collaborations in our efforts to improve student learning and transitions into and through higher education. As such, we encourage you to take advantage of conference opportunities to discuss current trends and issues, discover more about research and assessment findings, and learn from your fellow delegates about best practices for first-year students.

The staff of the National Resource Center and representatives from our co-host institutions are here to help you in any way that we can. Please do not hesitate to contact us at the conference registration desk if you have any questions or concerns. Those of us on the conference planning team look forward to meeting you, working with you, and learning from you during our time in Atlanta and in the future. Again, welcome and we hope you enjoy your time here.

Sincerely,

Jennifer R. Keup
Director
National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition

Welcome to the 30th Annual Conference on The First-Year Experience in Atlanta, Georgia. This conference is designed to provide a structure intended to be as professionally enriching as it is individually pleasurable. We hope this will be a rewarding conference for you.

Goals of the Conference
The primary goal of the Annual Conference on The First-Year Experience is to assist educators and administrators in institutions of higher education in the planning, implementing, and refining of programs designed to enhance the first-year experience. The conference aims to promote a comprehensive and engaging community open to the diversity of ideas, in which all delegates are given the opportunity and resources to grow personally and professionally.

Registration Information
Conference registration and information desk is located in M202 of the Marriott Atlanta Marquis. The staff of the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition will be available to assist you during the following dates and times:

- Friday, February 4, 2011: 10:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.
- Saturday, February 5, 2011: 7:30 a.m. – 6:00 p.m.
- Sunday, February 6, 2011: 7:30 a.m. – 5:30 p.m.
- Monday, February 7, 2011: 7:30 a.m. – 5:30 p.m.
- Tuesday, February 8, 2011: 7:30 a.m. – 12:00 noon

Hotel Map
The layout of the meeting rooms at the Marriott Atlanta Marquis is located on the inside front cover of the program.

Message Board
There will be a message board near the conference registration desk. Please check the board periodically for important general or personal messages.

No-Smoking Policy
The conference organizers request careful observance of the no-smoking policy. We enforce this rule due to the health risks associated with passive exposure to cigarette smoke.

Cell Phone Usage
The conference organizers request that all cell phones are turned to vibrate or off while attending sessions.

Cybercafé
Picture a place where you can sit away from the action, check your e-mail, and explore other online resources introduced to you during the conference. That place is the First-Year Experience Cybercafé. The Cybercafé is located in M102 of the Marriott Atlanta Marquis and is open during most conference hours. Several computers have been set up for use by conference participants only, with a limit of 15 minutes per user per visit.

National Resource Center Bookstore
Browse the newest and most popular titles from the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition. The National Resource Center Bookstore is located in M101 of the Marriott Atlanta Marquis and is open during most conference hours. Limited numbers of select publications will be available for sale in the Bookstore. Purchases may be made with cash, check, credit card (MasterCard, Visa, Discover, and American Express), or purchase order.
Donation of Empowering Parents of First-Year College Students: A Guide for Success

To commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Annual Conference for The First-Year Experience, the National Resource Center is sponsoring a special philanthropy project. The Center will be accepting donations at the conference to help provide copies of one of its most popular publications, Empowering Parents of First-Year College Students: A Guide for Success, to seniors in a few local Atlanta high schools with which the Center has established a partnership. A $0.25 donation will provide one copy of this publication to a senior in one of our partner high schools in Atlanta. We will be collecting donations on-site at the conference bookstore. Please bring your quarters and dollars to support this special project!

Pencil Project

As in years past, The National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition encourages you to participate in our ongoing outreach project to encourage low-income K-12 school students to consider higher education in their future. The conference organizers invite all conference participants to bring at least one new pencil (bring as many as you like) with your college or university name or logo to the conference. We will collect the pencils at the conference registration desk and will later distribute them to needy students in the host city or in Columbia, South Carolina. We hope you will participate in this effort.

Outstanding First-Year Student Advocate Sessions

Several current and past recipients of the Outstanding First-Year Student Advocate award are presenting sessions at this conference. These sessions will be designated with the special symbols seen above.

Conference Evaluations

Individual Session Evaluation Forms will be distributed and collected in each session by the presenter. Presenters please give session evaluations to the session monitors or drop them in one of the session evaluation collection boxes. Copies of evaluations may be picked up by presenters at the end of the conference.

An Overall Conference Evaluation Form will be sent to you via StudentVoice.com after the conference. When you return to your campus, please take a few minutes to complete the evaluation. The information you provide is used to evaluate the conference and to improve future conferences; therefore, your comments are extremely important.

Session Handouts

At the conference: There are several tables set up throughout the meeting space for presenters to leave extra handouts from their sessions. Presenters: Be sure to include your name and the title of your presentation on the handout.

After the conference: If you were not able to attend a session of interest, the handouts for the sessions will be available on our web site at http://www.sc.edu/fye/events/presentation/2011annual/ after March 10. Please note that only those handouts sent to us by presenters will be posted to the web site. All presenters are encouraged to submit electronic versions of their session handouts to the National Resource Center by e-mailing them to Shana Harrison at scharri2@mailbox.sc.edu

Copies and Faxes

A FedEx Kinkos is available at the Marriott Atlanta Marquis Business Center. Copies can be made in black and white at the cost of $0.15. Local faxes can be sent at the cost of $2.00 a page. Long distance faxes can be made at $3.00 for the first page and $2.00 for each additional page. Computers and printers are also available in the visitor center. Computers are available at the cost of $0.40 per minute. The cost of printing from the computers is $0.55 a page for black and white and $1.79 for color.
Internet Access
Complimentary internet access is included in hotel guest room rate. For those not staying at the Marriott Atlanta Marquis, wireless and high speed internet are available in the public areas at the cost of $9.95 for a 24-hour period. Guests staying at the hotel should make sure they activate Internet access in their hotel room to ensure access to the Internet both in-room and in public areas. Accounts activated outside of the room will prevent in-room access.

Parking
At the Marriott Atlanta Marquis, only valet parking is available at the cost of $28 per day.

MARTA-Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority
A single one way fare is $2.00. Multi-day visitor passes that includes unlimited rides can be purchased for one day at $8.00; two days at $11.00; three days at $13.00; four days at $15.00. MARTA’s airport station is attached to the airport, right off baggage claim.

MARTA rail operating hours:
Monday through Friday: Approximately 5:00 a.m. to 1:00 a.m. (last train leaves airport at 1:00 a.m.) Saturdays: Approximately 6 a.m. to 12:00 a.m. (last train leaves airport at 1:05 a.m.) Sundays/Holidays: Approximately 6:00 a.m. to 12:00 a.m. (last train leaves airport at 12:46 a.m.)

Childcare
The Marriott Atlanta Marquis uses an outside child care company called TLC Babysitting. Guests must contact the representatives directly. Contact Bonny at 770-410-4774 (day) or 770-354-7178 (evening) for rates and more information.

Photography
Please be aware that the staff of the National Resource Center will be taking photographs of conference attendees during the general sessions and in the exhibit hall. These images may be used in future marketing pieces for Center events and publications as well as on the Center’s web site. If you do not wish to be photographed, please let the photographer know.

Continuing Education Units (CEUs)
In order to meet continuing professional development needs and certification requirements, CEUs are available to preconference workshop and conference attendees at the Annual FYE Conference. Applicants will receive a Certificate of Participation from the Division of Continuing Education at the University of South Carolina. Applicants for conference CEUs only, must complete a CEU application form along with a session attendance form which require signatures from the presenters of the sessions they attend. The session attendance form is on pages 89-90 of the program booklet. All CEU forms must be returned to the conference registration table by noon on Tuesday, February 8, 2011. Preconference workshop attendees can receive a maximum of .5 CEUs (5 hours). A maximum of 1.2 (12 hours) may be earned for attendance for the conference. You will need to verify with your institution their acceptance of these credits for continuing professional development needs and certification requirements.

Session Formats
The sessions presented at this conference are in eight formats. The alpha designation with the session number indicates the session type.

Poster Sessions
Poster sessions are presented in the form of an exhibit and delivered primarily through the use of visual display and handout materials. Numerous poster sessions are scheduled concurrently, and conference delegates will be free to move from one poster session to another.

Poster session types:
- PR Research Findings (PR)
  This type of poster session presents research results focused on a specific topic or program.
- PA Assessed Programmatic Approaches (PA)
  This type of poster session presents on a specific programmatic approach at a single institution.

Concurrent Sessions
This session includes a formal presentation with time for questions and participant interaction.

Concurrent session types:
- CR Research (CR)
  These sessions present on quantitative or qualitative research that has been conducted on issues addressing student transitions.
- CT Trends & Issues (CT)
  These sessions address emerging trends, current issues, and broad concepts.
- CI Institutional Initiative (CI)
  These sessions highlight specific programs/initiatives that have been instituted, assessed, and shown to be successful on a particular campus.
- R Roundtable Discussions (R)
  These sessions promote open discussion around a significant or major issue or theme. Roundtable discussions provide attendees an opportunity to share ideas and learn from one another’s experiences.
- E Exhibitor Presentations (E)
  These sessions allow conference exhibitors to showcase products, share information on services.
- FD Focused Dialogues (FD)
  These sessions allow for open discussion with invited facilitators on popular topics of interest in higher education.

Be better.

At uncovering students’ passions.
At guiding their decisions.
At helping them find their right fit.
At developing tomorrow’s leaders today.
At making a difference.

You continually strive to be better at what you do.
Let us help you become a certified practitioner of the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® (MBTI®) and Strong Interest Inventory® assessments. In the process, you’ll not only enrich yourself, you’ll become a knowledgeable guide for your students.

How you’ll be better with CPP’s certification programs:
+ Learn how to professionally administer and interpret the assessments and reports
+ Earn hours/CEUs from several professional organizations

For more information on these programs, visit www.cpp.com/certification or call CPP Customer Relations at 800.624.1765.

MBTI, Myers-Briggs Type Indicator, and the MBTI logo are registered trademarks of the MBTI Trust, Inc. Strong Interest Inventory, the Strong logo, and the CPP logo are registered trademarks of CPP, Inc.
Alpha Lambda Delta National Academic Honor Society for First Year Students recognizes and rewards academic excellence among students during their first year of college. Open to full-time students who earn a minimum scholastic average half-way between the two highest grades given by the school (i.e. 3.5 or above on a 4.0 scale), Alpha Lambda Delta rewards academic excellence, promotes participation in honors programs, provides leadership development, and enhances student retention. Come by the exhibit to receive more information about starting a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta and enhancing the academic environment among first year students.

Unforgettable lives. Unforgettable stories.
Paperback bestsellers from Simon & Schuster

We know people CAN’T STOP TALKING about the #1 bestseller
Little Bee.

But we don’t want to tell you WHAT HAPPENS in this book. It is a truly SPECIAL STORY and we don’t want to spoil it. The MAGIC is in how the story unfolds.

“Stunning.”
—Thailan Pham, People (Four Stars and a People Pick)

“Masterly...
Nothing short of brilliant.”
—The New York Times Book Review

“Beautifully written...Cooper has an unfailing ear for language and a poet’s tender heart.”
—Alexandra Fuller, author of Don’t Let’s Go to the Dogs Tonight

“There is tenderness in this memoir, and Cooper is clear-eyed even as she tells of her loss.”
—The New Yorker

Sarah Nickerson is like any other career-driven woman who wants it all. Then one fateful day, she is involved in a tragic car accident and all the elements of her jam-packed life come to a screeching halt.

A traumatic brain injury completely erases the left side of her world, and Sarah must relinquish control to those around her as she struggles to find answers about her past and her uncertain future.

Now, as she wills herself to regain her independence and heal, Sarah learns that a happiness and peace greater than all the success in the world is close within reach—if only she slows down long enough to notice.

“Remember how you couldn’t put down Still Alice? Well, clear your schedule—because you’re going to feel the same way.”

“Douglas Kennedy always has his brilliant finger on the entertaining parts of human sorrow, fury, and narrow escapes.”
—Lorrie Moore, New York Times bestselling author

“Douglas Kennedy is famous for two things: writing insightfully about women’s lives and crafting narratives so utterly gripping as to redefine the concept of unputdownable.”
—The Times (London)

A spellbinding story of two lovers whose life together is swept away by the tide of history.

De Rossi’s memoir reminds us that fame and celebrity is no substitute for feeling comfortable in one’s own skin, and unconditional love.”

—Jodi Picoult

“I didn’t decide to become anorexic. It snuck up on me disguised as a healthy diet, a professional attitude. Being as thin as possible was a way to make the job of being an actress easier…”

“De Rossi tells her story with genuine insight and unflinching honesty…. You will cheer her on.”

Past and Prologue: Thoughts on 30 Years of the Annual Conference on The First-Year Experience®
A lot of things have changed since the first Annual Conference on The Freshman/First-Year Experience. And some things have not. While social, political, and economic upheaval, as well as new information technologies, have transformed the world in which we live and the institutions and students we serve, some of the challenges we confronted 30 years ago remain: unequal access to the benefits of a college education; meaningful accountability to those who help pay our institutional bills; chronically low persistence and degree completion rates; nagging gaps in those rates relating to socioeconomic status and race/ethnicity; and a continuing inability to implement what we know about effective educational practice. In this address, Terenzini will review these and other challenges, discuss NRC’s and others’ contributions to helping resolve them, and suggest changes in thinking and organizational strategies that might lead to more successful responses to these challenges than we have developed thus far.

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Paul P. Fidler

The National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition invites applications for the 2011-2012 Paul P. Fidler Research Grant. The Paul P. Fidler Research Grant is designed to encourage the development and dissemination of knowledge to improve the experiences of college students in transition.

With an award package that includes a stipend, travel to two national conferences, a presentation at a national conference, and priority consideration for publication, the Paul P. Fidler Research Grant supports and promotes research with the potential to have a national impact on student success. The Center invites applicants to submit proposals addressing a variety of topics, including underrepresented student populations, community colleges, advising, transfer and articulation, administrative policies, and other issues related to college student transitions.

Comprehensive Award Package

- Stipend of $5,000
- Travel to the 18th National Conference on Students in Transition, October 8-10, 2011, in St. Louis, Missouri, at which the award will be presented
- Announcement and recognition at the 18th National Conference on Students in Transition luncheon
- Travel to the 19th National Conference on Students in Transition, 2012, at which the research findings will be reported
- Announcement on the National Resource Center webpage, listservs, and print publications
- Priority consideration for publication by the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition

Application and Submission Deadline

The application and proposal form may be downloaded at www.sc.edu/fye/research/grant/proposal and must be submitted electronically to NRCrsrch@mailbox.sc.edu by July 1, 2011.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA
Primer for First-Time Attendees

7:45 a.m. - 8:45 a.m.

Atrium Level - A601/A602

Mary Stuart Hunter
Associate Vice President and Executive Director

National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition and University 101 Programs, University of South Carolina

Jennifer R. Keup
Director

National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition, University of South Carolina

John N. Gardner
Senior Fellow

National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition, University of South Carolina

President

John N. Gardner Institute for Excellence in Undergraduate Education

A tradition at The First-Year Experience Conferences since 1984, the “primer” reviews the events that led to the creation of University 101 at the University of South Carolina, the resulting series of conferences, and an international education reform movement known as “The First-Year Experience.” The presenters will attempt to situate the meaning of this now ubiquitous concept in higher education and define the philosophical assumptions underlying this conference series. They will also reflect on the current status of the movement, its accomplishments, and the current challenges bringing us together at this meeting.

1 Student Success and Retention for the Millennial Generation

7:45 am – 8:45 am

A701

Susie Wood
Senior Career and Education Consultant

Human eSources, Ltd

CollegeScope has designed an interactive college success course that appeals to the technology savvy Millennial generation. The course includes topics from college, career and lifelong success and can be delivered in a traditional, hybrid or online format. This student success course has been effective in increasing student retention as much as 27 percent at one of Human eSources’ community college schools. The Millennial Generation includes those born between 1977 and 1995. These students, for the most part, embrace technology in a way that none before them have. The proven CollegeScope curriculum combined with interactive cutting edge technology makes the program beneficial for students and instructors alike. This presentation will focus on how technology is used with proven curriculum to engage students in learning and assist professors with tools to monitor student progress.

2 Make Math “Add Up” for the Adult Learner

7:45 am – 8:45 am

A703

Bob Khouri
Instructional Video Specialist

Wisconsin Technical College System Foundation, Inc.

Many first year students spend time sitting in a familiar setting, a basic math classroom. As a more effective alternative, Wisconsin’s technical colleges system created ModuMath Basic Math and Algebra multimedia courseware to serve as an individualized, self-paced course or an easy-to-access supplemental learning resource. Session demonstrates how multimedia accommodates a wide range of learners with visual images, audio narration, contextual tutorials and continuous comprehension checks. Session attendees will be offered free, semester-length courseware trials.

3 Using BCSE and NSSE Data to Investigate First-Year Engagement and Outcomes

7:45 am – 8:45 am

A703

James Cole
Project Manager

Brian McGowan

Indiana University

This session will focus on practical uses of the Beginning College Survey of Student Engagement and the National Survey of Student Engagement. Participants will learn how information from these two surveys can be used to understand the relationship between the past high school experiences of entering first-year students and first-year expectations and their actual first-year academic engagement and experiences. Practical examples will include using BCSE-NSSE data to assess learning community and service-learning programs.

4 Walking the Talk—Using a Self-Study Process to Improve Student Success and Retention Rates

7:45 am – 8:45 am

A704

Andrew Koch
Vice President for New Strategy, Development, and Policy Initiatives

John N. Gardner Institute for Excellence in Undergraduate Education

The session will focus on how the successful Foundations of Excellence (FoE) self study process at the John N. Gardner Institute for Excellence in Undergraduate Education can generate findings and create plans that, in turn, yield increases in retention rates for new students over time. In addition, detailed information about the components and merits associated with the new Foundations of Excellence Transfer focus and some of the Institute’s other initiatives will also be shared.
Using Mind Maps to Manage Class Notes, Transform Studying Into Learning, and Become a Self-Directed Learner

A705
Toni Krasnic
Author of Concise Learning
Concise Books Publishing

The presenter of this session will discuss mind maps, which graphically organize and represent relations between ideas and concepts. Although mind mapping is already used by millions of people worldwide, it is still relatively little used in schools and is mostly unknown to students and teachers. However, once students and teachers get introduced to mind mapping, they find it a fun and engaging approach to enhance thinking and learning, and a great tool to manage information and increase productivity.

EBI and MAP-Works: A Focus on Assessment and Student Retention

Valerie McEvoy
Assessment Director
Educational Benchmarking (EBI)

Understanding the principles of assessment is the foundation for fulfilling your mission. This session will highlight the power of assessment and the need to provide the right information to the people who ultimately make the decisions that directly impact students’ lives. The presentation will focus on MAP-Works, EBI’s retention and student success program, and how this unique approach to student development is having a measurable impact on retention and student success.

Student Services and Resources: In-House vs. Third Party

A707
Katie Lynch-Holmes
Student Success and Retention Specialist Education Dynamics

Chrissy Coley
Senior Strategic Consultant
SunGuard Higher Education

Shani Fisher
Senior Sponsoring Editor
College Success Wadsworth, a part of Cengage Learning

Julie Holliday
Strategic Consultant
SunGard Higher Education

The article, “Student Services, in Outside Hands,” by Sara Lipka, brought the debate of third-party partnerships in higher education to the forefront. Lipka candidly discussed the positives and negatives of partnerships with higher education companies. This roundtable discussion aims to expand on Lipka’s article by continuing candid conversations with a panel of representatives who have provided student services in both nonprofit higher education and third-party companies.

Three Easy Steps to Financial Success

A708
Paul Mittelhammer
Vice President of Business Development
National Student Loan Program

It really is as easy as 1-2-3. This enhanced orientation for first-year students will provide the financial foundation students need to make smart financial decisions while in college. Learn how “keeping it simple” can be an effective tool to help students grasp key concepts that will stick with them for life.

Artificial Maturity: Addressing the Number One Issue Among First-Year Students Today

M104
Tim Elmore
President
Growing Leaders

Research shows that first-year students today are often advanced biologically, cognitively and socially when compared with earlier generations. Yet, significant cultural shifts have delayed emotional maturation, which affects their values, behaviors, paradigms and learning styles. Understanding this data prepares educators to evaluate their current pedagogy and curriculum, and implement more relevant first-year programming. This session identifies emotional maturation benchmarks that define student success and offers innovative ways to deliver content that cultivates these essentials.

Student Success Textbook/Planner: Engage Students with Intentional Planning and Content

Jane Hix
Higher Education
School Specialty, Planning and Student Development

Jennifer Latino
Director, First-Year Experience
Campbell University

Sheri Moore
Education Professor
University of Louisville

Stephanie Foote
Director, Academic Success Center and First-Year Experience
University of South Carolina Aiken

Carol Randel
English Professor, Developmental Education
Norwalk Community College

This session is a roundtable discussion with authors of student success textbooks and planner products: Skinny On College Success by Jim and Carol Randel; Connections, An Insider’s Guide to College Success by Sheri Moore, Jennifer Latino, Scott Moore; Teacher Resources by Stephanie Foote.

Intuitive Career Planning and the E-Portfolio

Quint DeWitte
Account Representative
Kuder, Inc.

We know that with a career plan in place, individuals are more likely to complete postsecondary education or training. Whether a new postsecondary student or an adult re-entering education, having access to a reliable online career planning resource can increase student retention and help individuals create their plans for success. This presentation will offer practical application ideas on using proven, online solutions and discovering how the e-portfolio can increase career opportunities.
12  Supporting Student Success with 24/7 Online Resources
M302
Valerie Kisiel
Co-Owner
Kristen Seldon
Marketing Coordinator
Innovative Educators

With increasingly limited resources and decreasing budgets, administrators are finding it tough to train students on critical student success skills. This session will explore a series of online tools students can use to gain knowledge about career options, study skills, money management, test-taking strategies, time management, and more. Presenters will discuss the use of videos, podcasts and web conferencing, all of which are critical to creating a dynamic and engaging learning environment.

13  The National Orientation Directors Association: Orientation 101
M303
Marcus Langford
Director of New Student Programs, Student Development & Academic Services
Rhodes College
Vice President for External Relations and Research
National Orientation Directors Association (NODA)

Orientation programs are a necessary and vital way to begin the process of connecting new students to the campus community through the development of skills, communication of values and expectations and delivery of campus knowledge, history and traditions. Just as there are a variety of institutional types, there are a variety of ways to plan, organize, manage, implement and evaluate these critical programs. This session, sponsored by the National Orientation Directors Association will provide an overview of and approaches to orientation programs.

14  First-Year Courses for Undeclared Students: Using Civic Engagement and Partners to Enhance Quantitative Reasoning
A701
Rob Catlett
Director, Centers for Community Research and Economic Education
Stacey Braun
Assistant Director, Student Success and Interim Director of Multicultural Affairs
Emporia State University

This session will explore initial attempts to develop a set of first-year seminar courses for undeclared students. With an emphasis on student learning, academic success, and retention, different approaches will be explored. From the challenges of respecting the academic freedom of student affairs professionals to implementing a civic engagement course focused on service-learning to improve mathematical and quantitative reasoning in low ACT math scores, the session covers an interesting blend of issues.

15  Increasing Student Participation in Common Reading Programs
A702
Melinda Messineo
Director, Freshman Connections
Peg Shaffer
Assistant Director, Freshman Connections
Ball State University

Since 1998, Ball State University has had a common reading program. Reflecting on this rich experience, presenters in this session will describe the book selection process from initial solicitation of titles, through selection committee formation, book ordering and distribution, as well as explore assessment strategies, curriculum development, and author visit logistics. This presentation will also show five years of student response data and program innovations that increased student reading completion from 24 percent almost 80 percent.

16  Supporting and Improving Training for Peer Mentors and Educators
A703
Herbert Bruce
Director, First-Year Programs
Casey Sawyer
Connection Leader Coordinator
Ashley Wilenta
Connection Leader
Nicole Balsamello
Connection Leader
Ehren McLaurin
Lynchburg College

Training peer advisors, mentors and educators should be fun and exciting for the instructors and the students. At Lynchburg College, the Connection Leaders (orientation leaders, peer advisors and educators) look forward to training as a chance to learn about themselves and each other. This session will show why every student involved in this training strongly agreed that the course used teaching methods/activities that reinforce concepts being taught and demonstrated educational practices that motivate students.

17  Assessing Success
A704
Dorothy Ward
Director, Entering Student Program
Theranl Mangadu
Research Associate
Irma Montelongo
Lecturer
The University of Texas at El Paso

How do institutions assess the outcomes and impact of first-year seminars? How do they publicize results? This presentation will address the rationale for, design of, and results of an assessment project that examined the Entering Student Program at The University of Texas at El Paso. Presenters will share approaches used for qualitative and quantitative assessment of first-year seminar students, peer leaders, and instructors, and will discuss how institutions can capture a more complete picture of program impact.
Evaluating Group Video Projects in Relation to University of Minnesota Student Learning Outcomes

A705
Murray Jensen
Associate Professor, College of Education and Human Development

Michael Stebleton
Assistant Professor, College of Education and Human Development

Peter Gary
Senior Teaching Specialist, College of Education and Human Development

Brady Johnson
Graduate Research Assistant, College of Education and Human Development

University of Minnesota

This session will describe a first-year inquiry course focusing on food taught by a team of three instructors within the College of Education and Human Development at the University of Minnesota. The focus of the session will be a description of a group capstone assignment involving the production of a short video on healthy eating and to provide evidence on the effectiveness of that assignment in relation to the University’s student learning outcomes.

50 Ways to Teach Your Students

Lisa Borden-King
Director of Engagement

Cheryl Nilsen
Associate Professor, Mathematics

Laurie Geller
Associate Director, First-Year Experience

Beth Odahlen
Director of the Center for Engaged Teaching and Learning

Kathy Hintz
Assistant Professor, Teacher Education

Minot State University

This session will explore concrete ideas on how to engage faculty and students in the learning process. Through a series of humorous skits and song, presenters will demonstrate pitfalls of existing practices and provide alternative strategies for teaching and learning at all levels, including the first year. The following strategies will be provided: interactive lectures, active note taking, discussion and question techniques, collaborative and cooperative groups/pairs, service-learning, civic engagement, community service, and depth not breadth focus on what matters.

Student Success Strategies for Men of Color

A707
Amy Baldwin
Instructor of English

Dalton Lemelle
Student Success Coach

Pulaski Technical College

This highly interactive session will focus on student success strategies, both in the classroom and beyond the classroom that will help men of color be more successful in college. The session will begin with an overview of research on African American male students and engagement and retention rates. Then, the session will highlight specific strategies used in a specially designed first-year seminar course for men of color. The session will end with practical strategies that participants can use on their own campuses.

Does Living on Campus Matter: Using NSSE Data to Understand the Experiences of African American Men

A708
Brian McGowan

James Cole
BCSSE Project Manager

Indiana University

Research suggests that social and academic integration that is facilitated by living on campus promotes a variety of desirable outcomes by enhancing students’ involvement and engagement. However, this body of research typically assumes that living on campus has equal positive benefits for all students. Given recent problematic engagement trends involving African American male college students, further exploration regarding their experiences is warranted. This presentation will compare experiences of first-year African American male students based on their living environment.

Developmental Education: A Collaborative Approach

M109
Lori Fair
Dean, Academic Affairs

Michael Williams
Counselor

Harrisburg Area Community College

This session will explore developmental education at Harrisburg Area Community College. Data will be shared about the past, the present and the future. The increase in students and students enrolled in developmental classes will be examined and solutions to meet the student needs will be shared. Student success and retention data will also be shared.

Challenges of the First-Year, Nontraditional Student

M104
Angie Williams-Chehmani
Department Coordinator

Anthony DeShazer
Undergraduate student

Culver Sherie
Undergraduate student

Yolanda Jackson
Undergraduate student

Cortney Stroud
Undergraduate student

Davenport University

Nontraditional students are enrolling in college in record numbers for a variety of reasons. However, there are priorities that become challenges for them to start, stay, and succeed. If higher education is to retain these students, it must address their needs. This session will focus on the changing face of the student body and their challenges and will provide recommendations for higher education.

Homeschoolers: Coming to a Campus Near You!

M105
Chris Benson
Associate Dean of Academic Advising and First-Year Experience

Madonna University

Nicole Nagy
Graduate Student
Due to increasing numbers of home-schooled students nationally, Madonna University recently decided to pursue this population as a target market. However, all academic and social programming on campus had been developed using models based on the experiences of traditionally schooled students. How do homeschooled students experience higher education? What meaning do these students make of their experiences? This session will explore a study that examined this often misunderstood population and their experiences at a small, private, liberal arts institution.

25 First-Year Seminars as the Cornerstone of General Education
M106/107
Jean Henscheid
University of South Carolina
Even before the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition was launched, advocates at the University of South Carolina and elsewhere toiled to draw attention to the learning experience of first-year college students. One method for achieving this vision was, and is, building the seminar into general education requirements. Seminars that assume this role take on unique characteristics and responsibilities. What do seminars embedded in general education look like? Is this role a blessing or curse? These questions will guide this roundtable discussion.

26 Learning in the First Year: Lessons From the Your First College Year Survey
M301
John Pryor
Director, Cooperative Institutional Research Program
University of California Los Angeles
How does student learning change over time with respect to academic skills, civic awareness and behaviors, and diversity-related beliefs and values? This session will explore a study that uses a national administration of the CIRP Freshman Survey and the Your First College Year Survey to look at the impact of the first year on these outcome measures and ties them to practices and experiences during the first year.

27 Advising Seminar: Engaging the Mission
M302
Matt Kretchmar
Dean of First-Year Students; Associate Professor
Denison University
Presenters in this session will discuss Denison University’s pilot of an advising seminar in which small numbers of first-year students meet with a faculty mentor in small, discussion-based groups. The program is designed to not only strengthen academic experiences, but to engage students in a more holistic and developmental way. One of the program’s benefits is a closer working relationship between the academic and student affairs divisions in pursuit of common learning outcomes.

28 Biology and Psychology: Gateway to Neuroscience
M303
Deborah Bidwell
Instructor of Biology
Mark Hurd
Associate Professor of Psychology
Pamela Jo Riggs-Gelasco
Associate Professor of Chemistry and Biochemistry
College of Charleston
Two years of data were collated and analyzed for a College of Charleston nonresidential learning community (LC) involving introductory majors in biology and psychology. Do learning community students outperform their peers who don’t participate in learning communities? Does participation in the learning community positively influence future academic performance? Are LC students more likely to declare science majors than non LC peers? Qualitative and quantitative assessment approaches were used for these analyses and will be presented in this session.

30 Drawing on Community Resources: Experiential Learning as the Foundation of a First-Year Seminar
A701
Director of the First-Year Program
Michael Edwards
Assistant Director for Academic Administration, First-Year Program
Sarah Miller
Assistant Director for Student Administration, First-Year Program
Alex Miller
Associate Director, Office of New Student and Family Engagement
DePaul University
At DePaul University, the first-quarter seminar required of all first-year students is founded on experiential learning that uses the community and geographic region (in this instance, city of Chicago) as an extended classroom, a text, a subject of inquiry, and a source of people knowledgeable on a wide variety of topics. Presenters will discuss this program.

31 Using a Virtual Librarian to Introduce Essential First-Year Information Literacy Skills
Carolyn D. Sotto
Director of FYE for the College of Allied Health Sciences
Olga Hart
Senior Associate Librarian
Barbara Macke
University of Cincinnati
Teaching library skills has been a common feature of FYE programs. Collaborative efforts between FYE programs and librarians have resulted in effective integration of information literacy skills. Students need to access information successfully, efficiently and evaluate information and its sources critically. Budget constraints have limited dedicated librarians for first-year students. This presentation will address creatively disseminating library information virtually to first-year students. Library assignments and assessment procedures will also be presented and discussed.

32 Achieving the Dream for Basic Skills Students via a First-Year Experience Program
A703
Frances Gusman
Vice President, Student Services
Jennifer La Serna
Dean, Arts and Letters
Duarte Adrienne
FYE Counselor
Jessica Figallo
FYE Counselor and Instructor
College of the Sequoias
In this session, presenters will share insight on the genesis of the College of the Sequoias first-year experience program and planning process. This will include an overview of the FYE program and the coordination and inception of the unique first-year seminar course that is part of the learning community model. The College’s FYE program is a joint effort between academic and student services, partnering with the California Basic Skills Initiative, Title V Hispanic Serving Institutions, and Achieving the Dream.

33 From QEP to FYE: Making the First-Year Experience a Priority
A704
Vivia Fowler
Dean of the College
Lisa Rouleau
Director of First-Year Experiences
Patricia Gibbs
Dean of Students/Vice President for Student Affairs
Wesleyan College
Designing and implementing a comprehensive first-year experience is an excellent approach to a college’s Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP), a requirement for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. Wesleyan College’s 2005 QEP is titled “Creating a More Intentional and Connected First-Year Experience.” This presentation will outline the process of developing an FYE QEP and will offer suggestions for preparing the fifth-year interim report and institutionalizing the QEP.

34 Who Am I and Why Am I here? Identity, Adventure-based Orientation Programs and Adaptation to College
A705
Rob Ribbe
Director, HoneyRock
Wheaton College
The results of a recent dissertation study on the relationship between identity formation and the transition to college will be shared in this session. A special emphasis of the study is on the role of adventure-based pre-orientation program on the entire first year cohort at a residential, Christian, liberal arts college in the Midwest.

35 There Is No “Easy-Does-It” to Discovering a Sense of Life Calling and Purpose in First-Year Students
Bill Milliard
Executive Director/Professor of Leadership Studies, Center for Life Calling and Leadership
Megan Gilmore
Coordinator of Life Coaching/Instructor of Leadership Studies, Center for Life Calling and Leadership
Indiana Wesleyan University
Indiana Wesleyan University is entering its 12th year of using a purpose-guided approach to working with first-year students that has had a dramatic impact on retention and graduation rates. A recent issue of O Magazine focused on An Easy-Does-It Guide to Finding (and Fulfilling) Your Life’s Purpose. This session will challenge that concept and will encourage a more comprehensive approach that integrates good theory, academic studies, student development, resident life, and spiritual formation.

36 Confessions of a First-Year Seminar Instructor: How to Make the Most of Failures in the Classroom
A707
Assistant Director, University Housing

Sunday | February 6, 2011
What happens when the best planned first-year seminar activities and assignments fail? Although it may feel like the end of the world, there is much to learn through these failures. In this session, the presenters will draw from collective experiences teaching first-year seminars to discuss how they have made the most of these learning opportunities. Participants will leave with resources they can use to recuperate and become better instructors.

37 First-Generation College Students: Championing Justice, Empowering Children and Youth A708
Barbara Johnson
Instructional Chair
Colorado Mountain College

How can service-learning foster the success of first-generation college students? This interactive session provides an overview of current research on service-learning and provides an example of students promoting justice for Darfur and helping children learn to read while advancing their own developmental reading skills. Participants will experience research-based instructional methods shown to support learners in their transition to college life, increase retention, and stimulate their active engagement in civic affairs.

38 Effects of Academic Preparation, Motivation, and Interest-Major Congruence on First-Year Academic Performance and Timely Degree Attainment at Two- and Four-Year Institutions M109
Justine Radunzel
Senior Research Associate
ACT, Inc.

Using data from 28 postsecondary institutions, the effects of academic preparation, motivation, and interest-major congruence on first-year achievement and timely degree attainment were examined. First-year academic performance was affected by motivation and academic preparation. Timely degree completion was directly influenced by first-year achievement and interest-major congruence, and indirectly affected by motivation. These findings underscore the importance of these two noncognitive constructs in understanding student adjustment and postsecondary success. Implications for counseling practice will be presented in this session.

39 Alcohol and the First-Year Experience: What We Know From the Research M104
Patrick Dyer
Lecturer of Psychology
Kimberley Frazier
Assistant Professor of Educational Policy Studies
Kennesaw State University
Ryan Lekan
Counselor's Assistant
Hill Counseling and Consultants

First-Year Seminar (FYS) faculty have an unique opportunity to work closely with first-year students during a transitional time that is marked by an increased risk of heavy alcohol consumption. An understanding of evidence-based knowledge in this area can increase faculty effectiveness. The aim of this session is to summarize a comprehensive review of the published research on alcohol and the first-year student.
A Golden Triangle: Structured Reflection in First-Year Seminars

Zaide Pixley
Dean of the First Year and Advising Kalamazoo College

How can we develop structured reflection? How can we ensure that student learning is informed by knowledge with closely examined assumptions and lived experiences—a golden triangle—result in deeper learning? How can first-year seminar faculty use assignments and strategies to help students connect their educational experiences, further their intellectual development, and deepen their learning? This session will feature a new transformational learning paradigm and field-tested, widely adaptable structured reflection assignments and strategies.

Digital Narratives: Using e-Portfolios to Assess Student Learning in First-Year Seminar

M302

Carrie Cokely
Associate Professor and Director, First Year Seminar
Curry College

This session will focus on the use of e-portfolios in a first-year seminar class as both a tool for students to document their learning and a mechanism for faculty to assess the student learning outcomes throughout the course. Results of an e-portfolio assessment project across two sections of first-year seminar at Curry College will be discussed along with the benefits and challenges of using e-portfolios to assess student learning.

Engaging First-Year Students Outside of the First-Year Seminar Course

M106/107

David Henriques
Assistant Dean, School of Academic Programs and Services
Shippensburg University

Kendra Wolgast
Director, Academic Support Center
Penn State Mont Alto

Many campuses lack the resources or administrative support to implement a well-defined and proactive first-year seminar. Presenters in this session will discuss how first-year seminars, of course, are only one component of a clearly articulated retention program targeting first year students.

Integrating Study Strategies Into Your First-Year Experience Class

M303

Laurie Hazard
Director, Academic Center for Excellence
Bryant University

Embedded in many FYE courses is study skills training. Exposing students to such topics only makes sense, since research suggests that high school skills won’t work to the same extent in a college. Researchers suggest that academic achievement is influenced as much by particular attitudes as by study skills instruction. Teaching strategies divorced from attitudes is futile, then. Oftentimes, unwitting instructors teach students “how to” manage time without helping students recognize attitudes that influence application. The session is designed for instructors who have encountered students who believe, “I already know ‘how to’ manage my time; I don’t need this class!”

Assessing a Common Reading Program's Effect on First-Year Experience

M301

Leslie Jo Sena
University College Common Reading Assessment, Instructor

Karen Weathermon
Director of Learning Communities
Washington State University

The common reading program at Washington State University has assessed students’ level of involvement with common reading over three years and how students rate their first-year experience, as defined by the goals of the common reading program. Presenters will demonstrate and facilitate discussion of how to create an assessment instrument, how to collect data, and how to use the results to improve programs as well as garner institutional support.

The Freshman Experience at Georgia Tech

A701

Michael Fulford
Assistant Director of Housing/Director of the Freshman Experience
John Michael Pantlik
Hall Director
Georgia Institute of Technology

Established in 1992, the Freshman Experience program at Georgia Tech is a residential-based initiative that supports students in their first year on campus. This comprehensive program is designed to help residents get the most out of their social and educational experience. This session will give a historical perspective of the program and how a focus on building community has been a hallmark of success and helped raise the first-year retention rate to 93 percent.

Chicago Rocks and the Pursuit of Happiness: Tearing Down the Silos at an Urban Commuter University

A702

Barbara Sherry
Coordinator, First-Year Experience
Kris Pierre
Assistant to the Vice President for Student Life
Audrey Natcone
Instructor, Justice Studies and Women’s Studies
Northeastern Illinois University

Northeastern Illinois University’s first-year program combines curricular and co-curricular components to promote student success. Increasing collaboration between academic affairs (where the program is located) and Student Life is a holistic approach intended to serve the unique needs of students attending this urban, commuter, federally designated university, focusing on student engagement through academic and co-curricular activities.

The University of Texas at El Paso

When it comes to selecting a career path, there is no time like the present. First-year students often say they are either absolutely certain or completely undecided, but the truth is often somewhere in between. This roundtable session will focus on discussion of tools and resources to use in the classroom and around campus to help students make solid choices based on real-world job exploration rather than assumptions about career paths.
Hispanic-serving institution. This session will explore how tearing down institutional silos has resulted in innovative partnerships and the sharing of resources.

48 Who Stole My Trophies? Developing an Academic Work Ethic in Today’s First-Year Students

Constance Staley
Professor of Communication; Director, Freshman Seminar Program
University of Colorado at Colorado Springs

It’s been said that “80 percent of success is showing up.” By the time they get to college, many of today’s students may have collected an impressive array of trophies for doing just that. The product of “Velcro parents,” they may not know their true strengths and lack the resilience to grapple with tough academic challenges. This session will focus on teaching strategies to develop students who earn their self-esteem and work for their success.

49 Managing Transitions and Changes in an FYE Program

Patricia Esplin
Director, Freshman Mentoring
Sharon Bigelow
Peer Mentor Coordinator
Brigham Young University

Although change is discomforting and disorienting, properly managed change can be a source of strength, learning, and renewal. Brigham Young University’s first-year program recently underwent a series of highly traumatic, mandated changes that had the potential to disrupt reorganization efforts and destroy morale. Drawing upon William Bridges’ book, Managing Transitions, the University helped staff and student workers learn from and let go of the past, guided them through the neutral zone, and successfully launched a new beginning.

50 Reflexive Learning: A Model For Using Blogs to Engage First-Year College Students in Regular Reflection

Tracia Cloud
Amelia Davis

Graduate Research/Teaching Assistant
University of Tennessee - Knoxville

As technology becomes more pervasive in education, blogging offers a way for instructors to capture students’ attention and engage them in learning. During a first-year studies course a blogging model was developed and implemented to provide students a space to reflect on their courses, experiences, and activities throughout their first semester. Presenters will discuss how this model can be easily integrated into existing curriculum to give students experience developing online resources and modeling appropriate online representations of information.

51 Academic and Engagement Planning: Coaching First-Year Students to Success

Jimmie Gahagan
Director of Student Engagement
Claire Robinson
Assistant Director, Academic Success Initiatives

Kimberly Dressler
Coordinator for Student Engagement
Samantha Young
The University of South Carolina

Planning is an important part of student success in college. Through assessment, reflection, and goal-setting, students can identify their interests, motivations, and resources that can help achieve success. This presentation will highlight ways to implement academic and student engagement coaching and mentoring to support students. Two tangible documents are used to assist this at the University of South Carolina: The ACE Academic Plan and the Student Engagement Plan. These plans, as well as strategies used to implement them will be examined.

52 Enhancing Student Learning and Memory: What Instructors and Students Need to Know

Debra Borden
Associate Professor of Psychology and Coordinator of the First-Year Experience
Corning Community College

Approximately half the students entering their first year of college are unable to effectively process information, think abstractly, generalize material or remember information long term. This problem is exacerbated by the fact that many of these students are operating at a sleep deprivation level worse than being drunk, which directly affects performance. Attendees will understand how learning, memory and critical thinking skills can be enhanced and will leave with specific learning strategies to use in the classroom.

53 Individuals on Campus Advancing Retention Efforts for First-Year Students

Frank Ross
Associate Provost for Student Success
University of North Texas at Dallas

Gayle Williams
Assistant Dean, University College
Indiana University–Purdue University, Indianapolis (IUPUI)

During tight economic times, many campuses find it difficult to financially support the development and expansion of important retention programs. In this session, presenters will share results of a five-year research project looking at the impact individual students, faculty, and staff have on the retention of first-year students. Research shows the specific behaviors first-year students identified that supported their success—at no additional cost to the institution.

54 Struggles and Success in Incorporating Critical Thinking into First-Year Seminars

Abbey Rosen
Assistant Professor
Jennifer Krueger
Director of Institutional Assessment
Marian University

One of the primary objectives for Marian University’s first-year seminar is to introduce students to the Paul and Elder Critical Thinking Model and assist them in learning to apply it to both their academics and personal lives. The session will focus on the struggles and successes involved in the implementation and instruction of this model in the seminar and incorporation of the model across the curriculum.
Promoting High-Impact Practices: Approaches to Increase Engagement and Expand Access in the First Year
M104
Jillian Kinzie
Associate Director
Indiana University Center for Postsecondary Research and NSSE
High-Impact Practices (HIPs), such as learning communities and service-learning, demonstrably enhance student engagement, learning, and persistence. This session will highlight how institutions have emphasized these structures and other pedagogical practices in the first year, used National Survey of Student Engagement (NSSE) results to focus attention on and inventory HIPs, and discuss approaches to ensuring widespread participation, including setting expectations for new students, and models for student and academic affairs collaboration to optimize these activities.

Developing and Assessing A Community College First-Year Experience Program
M105
David Ross
Director, First-Year Experience Program
Raritan Valley Community College
This session will review how the first-year program at Raritan Valley Community College was developed, reviewing the components and initial reactions and impact. The program will review how the program evolved from the college’s Title III grant, grant assessment activities and simultaneous institutional assessment. The process of developing the first-year experience components in addition to the assessment of activities using the Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education standards will also be reviewed.

Making Bricks Without Straw: Keeping First-Year Programs Vibrant in the New Normal
M106/107
Mary Ellen Bertolini
Associate Director, Writing, Lecturer, Tutor in Writing
Kathy Skubikowski
Director, CTR; Associate Professor of English; Assistant Dean for Instruction
Yonna McShane
Director of Learning Resources/Lecturer in Psychology
Middletown College
The current financial climate threatens the progress made in establishing and maintaining excellent first-year programs. Declining endowment funds and contributions have forced colleges to make difficult financial decisions. Even when first-year programs survive, they may lose some important resources that supported them. In this interactive roundtable discussion, participants will share ideas for keeping the first-year program vibrant in the new normal. Attendees will be encouraged to share how their institutions have dealt with similar budget challenges.

P.R.I.D.E. – Five Choices for Student Success
M301
Steve Piscitelli
Professor of History and Student Success
Florida State College at Jacksonville
This engaging, energizing, and entertaining session will demonstrate how “the five choices” place the power for action and success in students’ hands. Come prepared to learn, laugh, sing, share, and leave with a five-point plan for student success.

Using Peer Mentors to Deliver Cost-Effective First-Year Experience Events
M302
Rod Santos
Academic Achievement Counselor
University of California, Berkeley
Vance Jarrard
FYE Peer Mentor & Club President
John Kanemoto
FYE Peer Mentor & Club Vice President (Events & Fundraising)
Haylee Crowley
FYE Peer Mentor & Club Secretary/Treasurer
Kiersten Hansen
FYE Peer Mentor & Club Coordinator of Retreat/Training
California State University, Sacramento
Sacramento State first-year experience peer mentors serve nearly 1,200 first-year students every fall. Through grassroots efforts, the peer mentors developed cost-effective ways to run co-extra-curricular programs with minimal funding. Student turnout at these events is at an all-time high—600 at mid-semester. The screening of the movie “Inception” is one of nearly two dozen student-run events. How are these events funded? In this session, attendees will learn about cost-effective strategies to involve first-year students.

Retaining First-Generation College Students
Marcia Heiman
Head, Research & Development, Learning to Learn Department
Dan Bunch
Director, Learning to Learn Department
Boston College
This session will provide data on significant long-term impacts of a 3-credit learning to learn (LTL) course. LTL is a research-based system of learning strategies, on students’ GPA, rate of course completion, and retention. Studies presented include 98 percent graduation rates of first-generation, primarily minority students at four-year private university and 80 percent graduation rates for students at an urban community college.

A Strengths-Based Approach to Integrating Faith, Learning, and Relationships in the First Year
Nancy Biggio
Assistant Provost
Bridget Rose
Director of Academic Success and InSTRUCTOR in the Core Curriculum
Heather Mitchell
Career Counselor
Dean Smedley
Residence Life Coordinator and Foundations Instructor
Samford University
This roundtable discussion will focus on issues of adjustment for first-year students within the context of a faith-based or religiously affiliated institution. As we consider new approaches to increase student success and retention, special attention will be given to the benefits of a collaborative strengths-based model to enhance students’ academic and social acclimation in the first year.
Conference Luncheon Recognizing 2010-2011 Outstanding First-Year Student Advocates

11:30 a.m. - 1:15 p.m.
Marquis Ballroom D

We have arranged for informal interest groups to form during the conference luncheon. See page 4 for more information.

With the continued support of Cengage Learning, the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition is pleased to recognize this year’s Outstanding First-Year Student Advocates.

First Editions

Excelling in College, First Edition
Jeffrey KatZZer
©2012 • 344 Pages • 4-color • Paperback • ISBN-13: 978-1-4282-3120-7

Are your students stressed? Excelling in College recognizes the stress students experience and offers strategies to help them not just survive but also thrive in their college environment. Through exercises found in the text and online video clips, students are helped to address their fears related to speaking up in class, approaching instructors, making new friends, performing under pressure, dealing with financial struggles, and making healthy lifestyle choices.

Constance and Steve Staley’s FOCUS on College and Career Success explores the unique issues that career and technical college students face both inside and outside of the classroom, including juggling family, school, and work, and living/studying at home. The text includes thorough coverage of study skills, reading, writing, and test taking, while also focusing on the career skills that are essential to obtaining a job, such as interview skills, resume writing, and creating a job plan. The Online TechKnow feature examines situations specific to on-line and hybrid course environments, while case studies highlight students on various career paths and fully examine the challenges they may face.

The Master Student Series

Becoming a Master Student: Concise, Thirteenth Edition
Dave Ellis

This concise version of the best-selling Becoming a Master Student text has 150 less pages than the full edition and 2 fewer chapters to meet the needs of shorter courses. Through interactive journaling, a motivational writing style, and hands-on activities that students can apply right away, students will find even more ways to deepen their knowledge of themselves and the world around them.

The Essential Guide to Becoming a Master Student, Second Edition
Based on Dave Ellis’ Becoming a Master Student

A 160-page brief text perfect for first-year experience courses, orientation courses, and other short programs, The Essential Guide to Becoming a Master Student, Second Edition, allows students to focus on core concepts integral for success in an easy-to-read, short article format. The new edition now features the Kolb Learning Style Inventory.

62 Using Workshops to Extend Academic Skills
A701
John Lanning
Associate Vice Chancellor for Undergraduate Experiences
Ken Bettenhausen
Associate Professor of Business
Nadine Montoya
Program Coordinator
University of Colorado Denver
First-year seminar courses at The University of Colorado Denver emphasize academic content, and as a result, integrating academic skills into the seminar has been a challenge. The University recently began using optional workshops provided by student service offices to extend academic skills beyond the formal seminar. Presenters for this session will review the format for the academic skills workshops, the expansion for fall 2010, organization details, and preliminary assessment data.

63 Enhancing High Impact Practice through Strategic Partnership
Adrianna Guram
Coordinator of Academic Initiatives
Sheila Stoeckel
Academic Librarian
Ian Benton
The University of Wisconsin-Madison
The AAC&U’s LEAP initiative has identified first-year seminars as one of its High Impact Practices. The Center for the First-Year Experience at the University of Wisconsin-Madison has strategically collaborated with academic support services across campus for the past three years to enhance this practice. One such collaboration with University Libraries will illustrate the process. We will discuss strategies to align your first-year seminars and other first-year programs with the cultures of teaching and learning on your campus.

64 Working Up Something to Say: Sequencing Low-Stakes Writing Assignments to Produce a High-Stakes Project
A703
Richard C. Burke
Director for Curriculum Development
Lynchburg College
Sequencing low-stakes writing assignments lets first-year students move gradually but deliberately from the simple, narrow tasks that they’re familiar with to complex, challenging projects that call for a range of skills they are just beginning to develop. Presenters will discuss the underlying principles of low-stakes sequencing and evidence for its effectiveness, provide illustrative examples, and explore the ways in which sequenced low-stakes assignments can be integrated into first-year curricula, first-year seminars, and learning communities.

65 Today’s Net Generation Students: Why They Are Different, and Teaching Strategies that Work for Them
A704
Robert Feldman
Dean, College of Social & Behavioral Sciences
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
This session will focus on today’s Net Generation students and research demonstrating how they differ from students of prior generations. Presenters will discuss effective teaching strategies for Net Generation students, examining the use of innovative, impactful and low-cost technologies that can be incorporated into the classroom. The session will center on practical changes that instructors can make in their classes to respond to Net Generation students and prepare them for careers and lifelong learning.

66 Developing a First-Year Experience Course: Collaboration Between Student Affairs and Academic Affairs
A705
Tiffani Cresswell-Yeager
Director of Student Affairs
Penn State Lehigh Valley
Barbara Long
Academic Adviser
Penn State Lehigh Valley
In 2008, Penn State University charged its colleges and campuses to develop a First-Year Engagement Plan that incorporated social and academic initiatives, improved student retention by providing services, mentoring, programming, and self-reflection by all first-year students. This presentation will take participants through the initial development of the courses, celebrate the successes, discuss the pitfalls, evaluate the assessments, and leave with a packet of best practices and assignments that can be incorporated into their institutions.

67 The Evolution of FYE Instructor Training at a Community College
Julie McLaughlin
Academic Advisor, Co-Chair FYE Advisory Committee
Diane Stump
Counselor, Co-Chair FYE Advisory Committee
Cincinnati State Technical and Community College
To maintain quality and consistency in an FYE program, it is necessary to monitor all components of the program. Cincinnati State Technical and Community College has addressed these issues by developing an advisory committee that provides oversight, a standardized syllabus, and mandatory instructor training. This session will show data on student retention that supports this approach. We will focus on the evolution of our FYE instructor training program and provide session participants with practical applications and handouts that they can take back to their institutions.

68 Supporting the Success of High School Students Enrolled Full-Time in College
A707
Kathrynn Adams
Dana Professor of Psychology
Gail Webster
Associate Professor of Chemistry
Guilford College
Kim Spell
School Counselor
The Early College at Guilford

Guilford College, a private liberal arts college, and the Guilford County Schools, a public school system, collaborated to establish The Early College at Guilford (ECG) as the first early college in North Carolina. This session will describe the orientation and support systems that are provided by college and high school staff for ECG juniors and seniors who are all full-time college students. Assessment data will demonstrate that the students thrive in the college environment.

More Data! Using Multiple Data Sources to Improve Practice
A708
Cathy Brinjak
Assistant Professor and Director of Academic Advisement Services and FYST Seminar
Slippery Rock University
Sherry Woosley
Associate Director of Institutional Effectiveness, Academic Assessment and Institutional Research
Ball State University

Multiple measures can strengthen assessment efforts and more effectively demonstrate programmatic impact. Assessments such as institutional-specific surveys, national surveys, institutional counts, and outcome data can be linked to provide professionals multiple sources of evidence about the quality of their programs and the characteristics of their students. This session will show how to locate data sources, strategies for combining data, and provide concrete examples such as social integration, effectiveness of the FYE course, and satisfaction with the institution.

Beyond Best Practices: Infusing Innovation and Creativity Into Student Learning
M109
Matthew Ferguson
Assistant Director for Student Life
Rutgers University

The process of studying the actions of peer institutions and adopting “best practices” is commonplace in student affairs. While this can produce consistent and effective results, it potentially contributes to a culture of complacency and limited scope. Using an award-winning program as a primary example, this presentation will take participants through the creative process and identify strategies for innovation that attendees can use to remain relevant and engaging with the millennial generation.

Mentoring with P.R.O.M.I.S.E. (Purpose, Refocus, Opportunity, Mutual, Implement, Strategy, Excellence)
M104
Leon Thomas
Success and Retention Advisor
Anne Arundel Community College
Jesse Ford
Multicultural Programming Graduate Assistant
University of South Carolina

Why peer-to-peer mentoring? What are the benefits? This session will explore what it means to be a peer mentor and discuss proven practices that create successful relationships and programs. Participants will share ideas and experiences within and/or programming a peer mentor program. Learning outcomes and best practices contained within mentorship will be used to bridge participants’ and facilitators’ understandings.

Searching for GEMS: How a Simple Question Altered a Campus Climate
Lerita Coleman Brown
Director of GEMS Program/Professor of Psychology
Jennifer Cannady
Assistant Dean of the College and Director, Academic Advising
Agnes Scott College

This presentation illustrates how one institutional initiative can generate a positive “contagion” effect across campus. Assessment results indicate that through academic and social support, the GEMS (Generating Excellence in Math and Science) Program at Agnes Scott College, equips students with the confidence and skills to persist in the STEM disciplines in their first-year and beyond.

Faculty Insights Into Teaching First-Year Success Courses
Cheryl Rinker
Teaching Specialist, Reading
Julie Hernandez
Psychology Faculty
Sharon Cooper
Business Faculty
Geoff Hernandez
Audra Cooke
Coordinator of First-Year Experience
Rock Valley College
A roundtable discussion of faculty and staff from Rock Valley College, a two-year Community College will discuss their experiences teaching the Planning for Success course. The discussion will include an overview of the components of the Planning for Success course, teaching styles used in the success course vs. other disciplines, best practices for teaching the course, stories of best and worst experiences, and strategies for recruiting new course instructors.

Faculty Perceptions of First-Year Student Engagement
M302
Thomas Nelson Laird
Indiana University
Drawing on data from institutions that participated in the 2010 Faculty Survey of Student Engagement, this interactive presentation examines faculty perceptions of the nature and frequency of first-year students’ engagement in educationally effective practices. Session participants will learn, for example, how often faculty report the typical students they teach participated in active and collaborative learning practices and interacted with faculty members.

The Idea Model for Community College Success and Student Development
M303
Phyllis Curtis-Tweed
Interim Associate Provost
Medgar Evers College, City University of New York
Timothy L. Walter
Dean
Oakland Community College
Sherry Miller Brown
Director, McCall Nontraditional Student Success Center
University of Pittsburgh
The session will focus on presenting the "Idea Model for Community College Success and Student Development." The “Idea Model” is a comprehensive research based model that focuses on the critical factors that come into play as an institution develops a community college environment that enhances the probability of student success. The "Idea Model" focuses on four critical areas key to college success and appropriate student development: introduce community college students to the world of higher education; develop programs for community college students to help them successfully negotiate their path through community college; empower students to be high achievers in their academic programs; and advocate for nontraditional/adult students. For each of the four areas, the presenters will provide detailed models of the key strategies that are easily implemented with reasonable cost.

The Art of Choosing
M304
Marilyn Thomas
Professor of English
Menlo College
Given the diversity of backgrounds and degrees of college readiness in the students admitted to colleges today, it is a daunting challenge to choose just one common reading book for all incoming students. Another challenge is choosing a book professors will want to use to encourage conversation inside and outside the classroom. So how do we choose? And when we choose, how successful are we in using the book chosen? What should the criteria be in making that selection? Are our choices now being dictated by the publishers who have seen an opportunity to profit by publishing catalogs of first-year reading? Is using a common book a trend that will die because it doesn't accomplish the goal we set out for it, or is it actually fulfilling the purpose for which it was initiated? These questions will be considered in this session.

Sustainable Collaborations: Developing & Maintaining Cross-Campus Partnerships Programming
Brad Harmon
Associate Director of Residence Life
Brannon Anderson
Professor and Chair, Department of Earth and Environmental Sciences
Wes Dripps
Associate Professor, Department of Earth and Environmental Sciences
Brittany DeKnight
Associate Director, David E. Shi Center for Sustainability
Furman University
This presentation will emphasize the importance of cross-campus partnerships between academic affairs and student affairs professionals in successfully developing sustainable programming, both in the first-year experience and beyond. Campus faculty and staff will provide insight into their unique partnerships and will address the specific issues and challenges faced in sustaining each initiative. Program participants will discuss the issues and challenges they have faced on their own campuses.

Undergraduate Women in Science Program
A702
Linnette Good
Assistant Director, Science Diversity Office
Toyinda Wilson-Long
Purdue-Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation (LSAMP)
Purdue University-West Lafayette
This session will describe retention strategies incorporated into the Women in Science Program (WISP) at Purdue University. Data on increases in the number of female undergraduates, retention and graduation rates of the women in science will be discussed. Findings of specific interventions, suggestions to key elements contributing to the program’s success and references to other universities with such programs will be shared. In addition, this session will provide information about the introduction of the university’s first Sophomore Learning Community.
Increase Motivation by Including Career Development in Your College Success Course

A703
Marsha Fralick
Professor Emeritus
Cuyama Community College

Career development is a key component of a college success course which has increased student persistence by 26 percent at Cuyama Community College. Students are motivated to complete their college education if they have made a good choice of a major and career. Online portfolios are used to summarize career assessments and explore a career database. Practical online resources and classroom activities on these topics will be shared with participants.

Transforming the Experiences of First-Year Students

Maria Del Rio
Assistant Professor and Associate Dean, School of Science and Technology
Roxanna Domenech
Instructor
Aurora Muñoz
Language Skills Laboratory Technician
Universidad Metropolitana

In 2009, Universidad Metropolitana developed a comprehensive plan to address the needs of its most academically challenged first-year students. Building learning communities that incorporated academic and social initiatives along with systematic assessment monitoring to improve and fine tune support and academic offerings resulted in improved student retention and student satisfaction. This presentation will show findings and challenges.

Rebound to Good Academic Standing: Using Assessment to Improve First-Year Student Experiences

Liz Fitzgerald
Director of First Year Programs and Student Support
Laiko Quintero
Academic Advisor

Sarah Wilde
University of North Carolina Charlotte

A comprehensive survey of students on academic probation at UNC Charlotte identified particularly high probation rates among first-year college students. Students understood they were in trouble and identified possible strategies for improvement, but few followed through in seeking out assistance. The 49er Rebound model addresses the multifaceted concerns of first-year students on probation. This session highlights assessment, program, results in improved student retention, and lessons learned in reaching the second-semester student population.

Impacting Student Transition: The First-Year Success Series

Marion Meadows
Program Coordinator
Julie Schultz
Assistant Director
Joanne Dury
Coordinator
The Ohio State University

This session will examine the First-Year Success Series, a nationally-recognized program for first-year students at The Ohio State University. The Success Series is a series of approximately 300 sessions which address transitional issues and supplement the university survey course. Presenters will discuss the history of the Success Series, the theoretical basis for the program, qualitative and quantitative assessment of the program in its entirety, and future implications for continued excellence.

Sustaining a Successful Peer Mentoring Program

A707
Jason Bentley
Samantha Thorpe
Sabrina Hebeler
Central Michigan University

This session examines the development of an undergraduate peer-mentoring program with focus on engaged learning and college student development theory. Specifically, attention is given to the professional development programs, academic coursework, online learning modules and practicum component for students in mentoring roles. Participants in this session will receive recruitment materials, sample assessments, applications, and case studies for use in training and development sessions and learning modules for use in peer mentoring courses.
Since its founding in 1986, the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition has been committed to the development of a solid literature base on the first-year experience and other significant student transitions. Our editorial staff will introduce a variety of publishing opportunities available through the National Resource Center and discuss strategies for crafting publishable submissions out of a research study, model program, or general topic. While special emphasis will be placed on writing for National Resource Center publications, the tips offered will have broad applicability to a variety of higher education publishing venues.

Dian Squire
Assistant Director of Orientation

University of Maryland, College Park

Research shows that Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Queer (LGBTQ) students often have to balance multiple identities. Their LGBTQ identity requires them to live in a hetero-normative culture, while simultaneously expressing (or hiding) their LGBTQ identities. Combined with their identity as first-time college students, the acculturation of LGBTQ-identifying students into the university may be more difficult than that of their non-LGBTQ counterparts. This session will focus on the University of Maryland’s first-year program designed to provide significant support within the LGBTQ community. The program has resulted in an improved retention and commitment to the university, higher self-reported student satisfaction, and higher academic achievement.

An FYE for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer and Ally Students at the University of Maryland

Research shows that Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Queer (LGBTQ) students often have to balance multiple identities. Their LGBTQ identity requires them to live in a hetero-normative culture, while simultaneously expressing (or hiding) their LGBTQ identities. Combined with their identity as first-time college students, the acculturation of LGBTQ-identifying students into the university may be more difficult than that of their non-LGBTQ counterparts. This session will focus on the University of Maryland’s first-year program designed to provide significant support within the LGBTQ community. The program has resulted in an improved retention and commitment to the university, higher self-reported student satisfaction, and higher academic achievement.

Making a Fresh Start: A Multisensory Orientation Model for At-Risk First Year Students

Joseph Wassif
Doctoral Student

Forrest Schwartz

West Virginia University

Fresh Start is a multisensory orientation program designed to positively integrate at-risk first-year students into university culture. This session will focus on how experiential learning, adventure based counseling, and living-learning community tenets can be used to develop preventative college programs. Presenters in this session will discuss West Virginia University’s model and student retention data.

30 Years of FYE: Reflecting Upon Our History and Looking to the Future

4:00 p.m. – 5:30 p.m.

Panelists:

John N. Gardner, Senior Fellow, National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition, University of South Carolina

President, John N. Gardner Institute for Excellence in Undergraduate Education

Mary Stuart Hunter, Associate Vice President, National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition and University 101 Programs, University of South Carolina

Betsy O. Barefoot, Fellow, National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition, University of South Carolina; Vice President and Senior Scholar, John N. Gardner Institute for Excellence in Undergraduate Education

Patrick T. Terenzini, Distinguished Professor of Higher Education and Senior Scientist, Emeritus, Center for the Study of Higher Education, Pennsylvania State University

Christian K. Anderson, Assistant Professor of Higher Education, University of South Carolina

Facilitator: Jennifer Keup, Director, National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience & Students in Transition, University of South Carolina

As the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition celebrates its 30th Annual Conference, it provides an excellent opportunity to reflect upon the history and progress of the first-year experience movement in higher education and the role of the National Resource Center in the national and international efforts to improve student learning and transitions into and through higher education. Five panelists will lead a discussion of the historic origins of the first-year experience movement; the establishment and role of the National Resource Center in the expansion, scholarship, and leadership of FYE; and how FYE and the work of the National Resource Center fits into the broader scope of history, research, and trends in American higher education.

The focus of this session is a comprehensive analysis of the preparation, execution and evaluation involved with summer bridge programs, specifically the Urban Scholars’ Academy at the University of the District of Columbia (UDC). As one of the historically black colleges and universities (HBCU), the only urban land grant institution in the nation and the only public university in the nation’s capitol, UDC has the unique challenge of serving an ever-growing diverse student population while maintaining its historical identity and high educational standards, which is the overarching issue that panel members will discuss. Ultimately, this session will address how to implement summer bridge programs that address specific student needs as well as university expectations.

The first year matters

Bedford/St. Martin’s is pleased to publish three exceptional books from the distinguished author team of John N. Gardner, A. Jerome Jewler, and Betsy O. Barefoot. Not only do these texts represent the authors’ practical experience as teachers and directors of the course and decades of their research, but each version now bears the stamp of Bedford/St. Martin’s conscientious development and attention to detail.

FD 94 5Cs: A Model for Supporting, Advancing and Improving Decision-Making Skills
A701
Rhonda Atkinson
Professor of Education
Valencia Community College
Debbie Longman
Professor
Southeastern LA University

While students understand the importance of big decisions such as choosing a college or a major, they often fail to see that daily decisions about time, learning, money, health and other issues have long-term effects on academic and personal success. A structured plan for thinking through the decision making process in authentic situations provides support for advancing and improving decision-making skills. This session describes the 5C model (Challenge, Choices, Consequences, Choose, Check) with applications to FYE topics.

FD 95 Kennesaw State University’s Early Start Bridge Academy: Support for Mathematics Students

Assistant Professor of English
Nicoly Myles
Coordinator, Early Start Bridge Academy
Rob Birrell
Senior Lecturer of Mathematics
Robin Saunders
Lecturer of First-Year Programs
Kennesaw State University

This session describes Kennesaw State University’s Early Start Bridge Academy (ESBA), a research based summer bridge program, offering learning communities for developmental mathematics and college algebra students. Each mathematics course is coupled with a first-year seminar in this unique curricular and program design.

FD 96 Enhancing Academic Self-Efficacy Through Success Coaching
Samantha Thorpe
Danielle Merrill
Success Coach
Melissa Bussear
Coordinator for Administration
Sabrina Hebeler
Central Michigan University

Successful athletes train with excellent coaches. Senior executives engage in coaching to prepare for advancement. To support first-year student success and address issues related to low academic self-efficacy, Central Michigan University created personal success coaches to provide first-year students with enhanced academic and personal supports. Coaches assisted students identified as having transitional concerns related to academic and social integration, academic behaviors predictive of departure, and financial stress. This session will actively engage participants through discussion of the theoretic underpinnings of academic coaching and the practical strategies utilized to support early development of habits contributing to academic success and persistence.

FD 97 Perfect Match: Blending Academic and Student Affairs Resources to Operate a First-Year Seminar
Alex Miller
Michael Edwards
Sarah Miller
DePaul University

Presenters will discuss DePaul University’s Chicago Quarter, cooperative programming approach involving faculty, staff, and students. First-year students are required to take a Chicago Quarter class that is team taught by a faculty member and a student mentor (and sometimes a staff professional). The faculty member is responsible for the academic portion, which focuses on some aspect of the city of Chicago. The student mentor, trained by student affairs, teaches the Common Hour. The staff professional assists with Common Hour.

FD 98 Using Blackboard to Promote a First-Year Community
Amber Manning
Graduate Assistant, Saluki First Year
Southern Illinois University Carbondale

First-year student success is linked to solid support networks. Implementing a first-year Blackboard course can create a support community for students in transition. Blackboard creates a safe space where students can utilize open dialogue about their adjustment and experiences. The session’s objective is to introduce opportunities to expand a first-year support community through Blackboard.

FD 99 Integrating Technology Into First-Year Courses
Melissa Johnson
Assistant Director, Honors Program
University of Florida

First-year experience courses can provide ideal environments for developing technological competencies and skills among students. This presentation will show multiple methods of using technology as a complement to course delivery and assignments, including blogs, microblogs, wikis, word clouds, course management systems, discussion boards, and social networking sites. Participants will leave with a greater understanding of how to implement relevant technologies into their own courses.

FD 100 Running on Empty: Sustain Yourself First!

Chris Benson
Associate Dean of Academic Advising and the First-Year Experience
Nicole Nagy
Eastern Michigan University
Higher education professionals spend their days teaching students how to balance school, family/home, work, socializing, and self. Yet, these professionals seldom follow their own advice. Are you balanced emotionally, physically, and spiritually? Are you happy? Evaluate your current state of being, set goals for self-nourishment and happiness, and create a plan to bring rest, reflection, and rejuvenation into your daily life. The end result: healthy practitioners who are energized for their work with students. Learn how one practitioner overcame failure, found happiness, lost weight, and ran three marathons!

FD 101 Engaging Students: Using Problem Based and Active Learning Techniques in Library Instruction

M104

Debbie Malone
Library Director
DeSales University

Colleen Boff
First Year Experience Librarian & Acting Instruction Coordinator
Bowling Green State University

Problem-based learning presents an opportunity for librarians and instructors to collaborate on designing learning experiences that allow students to improve their information literacy skills within their standard course curriculum. The focus is on moving from lecture and demonstration to asking students to solve interesting research problems in guided small groups. Such interactive learning experiences can both engage students and lead them to use higher quality information sources.

FD 102 How Are We Handling Changing Times? Examining “Generation Me’s” Expectations Against Ours

David Sabol
Senior Lecturer, Department of English and University College
Academic Coordinator for Learning Communities, University College
Co-Director, IUPUI Summer Bridge Program
University College Coordinator, IUPUI Summer Success Academy

Indiana University-Purdue University
Indianapolis

When most of us entered our undergraduate institutions, we learned rather quickly what the rules were for college classrooms, and we adapted. We were used to a set of expectations coming out of our secondary experiences. Many of our entering students today are coming from very different home and learning environments and are unaware of basic rules of etiquette that most of us take for granted. This naiveté on the part of our students can turn into classroom management issues, which can both disrupt and invigorate the learning environment. This session will address these two questions: What are the current etiquette issues in your classrooms? How can we either change or adapt to “Generation Me’s” expectations?

FD 103 Students Helping Students: A Service-Learning Partnership Between the First-Year Experience Course and GEAR UP

M301

Doug Gardner
Laurie Miller
Director of Utah Statewide GEAR UP Program
Alexis Palmer
Director of Volunteer and Service-Learning
Denny Aldridge
Counselor, GEAR UP
Sharon Bluth
Assistant Director, Utah GEAR UP
Utah Valley University

This session introduces a Service-Learning partnership between FYE instructors and the federal college access program GEAR UP. FYE instructors at Utah Valley University provided an opportunity for their students to engage the curriculum by mentoring high school students enrolled in GEAR UP. During this session, representatives from the FYE and GEAR UP will share experiences, activities, assessments, and results. While sharing our experiences, we will also guide participants in brainstorming ways to institute similar programs.

E-Source for College Transitions is a complimentary biannual electronic newsletter published by the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition.

Its primary purpose is to provide practical strategies for supporting student learning and success. Articles on a variety of topics related to student transitions are welcome, including those focusing on:

- Strategies for addressing the first-year, sophomore, senior, and transfer transitions at different types of institutions
- Innovative teaching strategies and programs addressing the needs of special student populations
- Strategies for assessing student learning experiences, programs, or courses
- Descriptions of institutional initiatives with demonstrated results
- Descriptions of new and relevant print and online resources

Two boys named Wes Moore were born in the same neighborhood of the same American city only a year apart. One grew up to be a Rhodes Scholar, army officer, White House Fellow, and a top young business leader—the other is serving a life sentence in prison. Through an unlikely friendship, the two Wes's discovered all of the similarities in their stories, and also the dramatic points of inflection—involving incidents of sudden violence, luck, uninformed choices, and powerful mentors—where their stories fatefully diverged. Here is their dramatic twinned story, set against the larger story of the persistent challenges—and new possibilities—facing young men in America.

"Moving and inspiring, The Other Wes Moore is a story for our times."
—Alex Kotlowitz, author of There Are No Children Here

As a young Muslim growing up in Illinois, Patel faced racism and ignorance. Rather than withdraw into fundamentalism, Indian-American Muslim and former Rhodes Scholar, Eboo Patel today strives to create bridges across faiths, convinced that interfaith understanding is key to ending religious intolerance and warfare.

"Acts of Faith, a beautifully written story of discovery and hope, chronicles Dr. Eboo Patel's struggle to forge his identity as a Muslim, an Indian, and an American. In the process, he developed a deep reverence for what all faiths have in common, and founded an interfaith movement to help young people to embrace their common humanity through their faith. This young social entrepreneur offers us a powerful way to deal with one of the most important issues of our time."
—President Bill Clinton

John Prendergast lectures widely at college campuses

Human rights activist John Prendergast and Oscar-nominated actor Don Cheadle bring us an empowering and hopeful new book, as they reveal the steps being taken by engaged citizens—"Upstanders"—famous and unknown, here and abroad, to combat genocide, rape, and child soldierdom in Africa, and show how you can be a part of the movement. Learn how to join the burgeoning people's movement dedicated to ending these horrific practices, now and forever, in this inspiring call to smart activism and meaningful action. Prendergast is Co-Founder of Enough, the anti-genocide project at the Center for American Progress in Washington, D.C.

Top Common Reading Book, adopted at more than 30 colleges

Her name was Henrietta Lacks, but scientists know her as HeLa. She was a poor black tobacco farmer whose cancer cells—taken without her knowledge in 1951—became one of the most important tools in medicine, with disastrous consequences for her family. Today, her family can't afford the health care advances their mother's cells helped make possible. It's a story inextricably connected to the dark history of experimentation on African Americans and the birth of bioethics.

"An incredibly readable and smart text that should be a part of countless university discussions . . . Ethically fascinating and completely engaging—I couldn't recommend it more."
—Deborah Blum, Helen Firstbrook Franklin professor of journalism, University of Wisconsin-Madison

"A stunning illustration of how race, gender and disease intersect to produce a unique form of social vulnerability, this is a poignant, necessary and brilliant book."

PR 104 MAP-Works and Retention from Year 1 to Year 2: A Programmatic Approach
Cathy Warner
Residence Hall Director
Shawn Wilson
Director of Student Retention
Abby Howe
Resident Assistant, Student Assistant at Office of Retention
Dan Auer
Resident Assistant
Central Michigan University
In 2009-2010, Central Michigan moved to using MAP-Works as a student assessment and retention tool. As part of this change, several offices were involved in building partnerships, create a referral process, and develop follow-up loops. From 2009 to fall 2010, retention increased 3.5 percent from first year to sophomore year. Presenters will discuss the approach and overall strategies used in reaching out to students, addressing concerns, and providing referrals to resources, offices, academic support, and financial aid.

PR 105 100,000 First-Year Trajectories: Trends and Traits that Matriculate

Julian Smit
Professor of College Success
Utah Valley University
This study analyzed the university records of 106,234 UVU students who attended between 1999-2010. Focus was on background and demographic traits which contextualized their FYE and contributed (or didn’t) toward matriculation and graduation with an associates or bachelor’s degree. Race, sex, age, credits brought with them to their first term and coming at a high school age predicted their outcomes. The traits were put into a regression model depicting their complex interactions together.

PR 106 Tapping the Fountain of Youth: Hiring Peer Instructors to Infuse FYE Program with Renewable Energy
Catherine Queener
Heather Casto
Academic Advisor/Coordinator of Supplemental Instruction
Wright State University
Comparison of learning communities (LC) evaluation data and average grades for supplemental instruction (SI) non-users, casual users, and committed users, shows that first-year students at Wright State University experience higher satisfaction and perceive greater achievement of LC goals with peer instructors compared to staff instructors and also earn higher grades, on average when seriously participating in Supplemental Instruction led by student SI leaders, compared to students in the same class who do not participate in SI. This session will explore these findings.

PR 107 “Let’s Talk About It”: Learning Beyond the Classroom
Thura Mack
Professor/Coordinator of Community Learning Services
Laurie Roberson
Director of Student Services
University of Tennessee
Libraries are the heartbeat of college and university campuses. The University of Tennessee Libraries’ Diversity Committee takes a multi-disciplinary approach to engaging a diverse student body. Though innovative collaboration with other campus groups, we introduce diversity to students early in their college careers. What better learning environment to host “Let’s Talk About It” as part of a cultural series? Examples will be displayed.

PR 108 Does One-Size-Fit All? A Segmented Analysis of Psychosocial and Generational Issues That Influence Retention of Adult Learners
Debbie Ritter-Williams
Associate Faculty
Ruby Rouse
Executive Director, University of Phoenix Institute
University of Phoenix
Few studies examine psychosocial factors affecting adult student retention. In addition, most studies aggregate all learners over the age of 22 into a one size fits all “adult” category, without acknowledging or investigating unique differences based on generational cohort. The presenters in this session will report on preliminary results from a national, multi-institutional survey of adult learners designed to identify how psychosocial and generational factors influence retention of adult learners.

PR 109 Chocolate: Financial Accounting as a First-Year Seminar
Priscilla (Penny) Wightman
Business Department Chair
Hartwick College
The challenge is combining technical pre-professional learning outcomes with those identified by Hartwick College’s Mellon FYS grant participants, including the value of the liberal arts. What better way than to study chocolate and visit Hershey, PA? This session will present the activities chosen to achieve the combined outcomes and the results of chocolate assessment compared with other Mellon courses and with other financial accounting courses.

PR 110 Using a Case Study to Assess Student Learning of Principled Problem Solving
Clay Harshaw
Coordinator of the First-Year Experience
Guilford College
Guilford College requires the introduction to principled problem solving (PPS), an initiative that strengthens the college's transformative education as a part of its interdisciplinary first-year seminars. PPS has three tiers through which students learn PPS: foundations, stories and narratives, and application. The use of case studies is an effective method to assess the students’ learning of PPS. This poster session explains how case study was used effectively in a specific first-year interdisciplinary seminar.

PR 111 The Psychosocial Predictors of Academic Success of First-Generation African American College Students

Angela L. Williams
Academic Advisement Specialist
Bowie State University

With a growing number of first-generation college students entering institutions of higher learning, educators are striving to broaden their understanding of this group’s educational strengths and limitations in an effort to help them be successful. This session focuses on the study’s examination of the predictors of academic success of first-year, first-generation African American college students. The predictors included internal locus of control, internal resilience, and protective factors. The dependent variable or outcomes were student success as measured by GPA and retention.

PA 112 Successful Academic Partnerships

Natalie Bernardina
Graduate Assistant for Academic Centers for Excellence (ACE) and Marketing
Mckinlaye Harkavy
Graduate Assistant for Academic Programs and Partnerships
University of South Carolina

The purpose of this poster session is to illustrate the benefits of partnerships between academic success programs and campus offices. These partnerships equip students with necessary skills to succeed academically by providing resources to which they might not otherwise be exposed. Programs such as ACE (Academic Centers for Excellence) offer a coaching model that can be tailored to students’ individual needs, which in turn will allow for an increase in academic performance.

PA 113 Promoting a Healthy College Lifestyle

Chantelle Fowler
Coordinating Peer Mentor and Teaching Assistant for Freshman Seminar
Becky Crawford
Freshman Seminar Instructor and Freshman Mentoring Administrative Assistant
Brigham Young University

When entering college, first-year students experience more freedom than ever before. Their opportunity to make choices influences both health and academic success. Brigham Young University developed a program to support students in making better choices around issues of healthy habits. The program included surveys to track progress and behavioral changes to help students with health habits and academic success. This session shares the specifics and the positive impact the program has had on first-year students.

PR 114 Creating Meaningful Orientation Experiences: Transforming Orientation Programs at a Private Liberal Arts College for Women

Erin Howle
Director of Student Leadership
Agnes Scott College

Focusing on transformational changes in orientation program design and structure at a private liberal arts college for women, this poster presentation will review qualitative and quantitative research on the orientation group and peer mentoring experience. Specific attention will be given to the design and implementation of the orientation peer mentor program as well as collaboration between student affairs and first-year seminar faculty.
115  Fostering Success of First-Year College Students with Disabilities
Holly Hoffman
Associate Professor

Ann Roberge
Special Education Graduate Student
Central Michigan University

This presentation will show results of a Central Michigan University survey designed to discover trends in sources of success for first-year students with disabilities. Students reported having families and services on campus as major factors influencing their levels of success. They also shared types of accommodations used, as well as suggestions for teaching practices to assist in learning at the college level.

116  What Happens to Peer Mentors: The Long-Term Influence
Sanita Ley
Freshman Mentoring Peer Mentor
Ramona Cutri
Professor, Teacher Education
Pat Esplin
Program Director, Freshman Mentoring
Brigham Young University

Research has explored the impact of mentors on protégés’ experiences as well as the peer mentors’ own learning during and immediately after their experiences as peer mentors, but little research has examined the long term impact on their life choices and experiences. This poster session reports the long term effects of mentoring experiences on the mentors and how these experiences have shaped their decision-making skills, community involvement, adult development, and career choices.

117  Conversations Around the Table: Promoting High Impact, Low Cost, Easy Implementation of Faculty/Student Interaction
Katie Patton
Graduate Assistant for Academic Success Initiatives
Graduate Assistant for the Office of Student Engagement
University of South Carolina

Interactions between students and faculty can provide much-needed support for first-year students; however, these students may not feel comfortable initiating this contact on their own. This poster session will outline two programs that encourage faculty/student interaction. Out-to-Lunch is a program that allows students to take their professors to lunch at campus dining venues, while mutual expectations helps open the lines of communication between students and professors regarding their expectations of each other in the classroom.

118  Identifying and Measuring Peer Mentor Development: A Qualitative Rubric Analysis
Elizabeth Yates
Freshman Mentoring Peer Mentor
Mindy Davis
Freshman Mentoring Peer Mentor
Stefinee Pinnegar
Fred Pinnegar
Associate Director, Freshman Mentoring
Brigham Young University

First-year programs invest resources in developing strong peer mentors. However, because research has provided few guidelines to direct selection and training, the criteria used is largely intuitive and haphazard. This poster session explores whether the use of peer mentor constructed rubrics can inform these processes. It reports the analysis of such rubrics created by 41 peer mentors of varying abilities. In the analysis, we tracked three dimensions of peer mentor development: action, motivation, and intention.

119  Effects of Peer-Questioning and Self-Questioning Training on College Students Comprehension of Textbook Material
Tanya Haye
Douglas College

This session will present the use of self-questioning and peer-questioning as teaching and learning strategies for first-year college students. This presentation will report on the effects of using self-questioning and peer-questioning to enhance first-year students’ comprehension of principles presented in the course textbook. The results suggest that using these strategies without lectures can improve students’ comprehension of textbook material. The added bonus is that students come to class prepared to participate.

120  Making the Connection: Providing a Faculty Mentorship Program for New Students with Disabilities
Larry Markle
Director, Disability Services
Jacqueline Harris
Coordinator of Study Strategies and Writing
Ho Taiping
Professor of Criminal Justice and Criminology
Roger Wessel
Associate Professor of Higher Education
Ball State University

How can faculty members be prepared to effectively mentor new students with disabilities? How can faculty be recruited to mentor these students? What do they need to know? The presenters in this session will share an educational program specifically designed to prepare faculty who mentor students with disabilities. This project, funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, includes a mentorship program for students with disabilities, best practices to use when working with students with disabilities, and enhanced learning center support.

121  Student Perceptions of The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks and the Common Book Program
Esther Godfrey
Director of Composition
University of South Carolina Upstate

The process of selecting a common book and of coordinating co-curricular activities for first-year students is a challenging and labor intensive task. Committee members must take into consideration a range of factors, including current events, opportunities for interdisciplinary collaboration, and students’ unique backgrounds and interests. Prior to this study, no systematic assessment of the program had been... performed. This session will focus on this project’s assessment of students’ perceptions of the common book program and its value to their first-year experience.

PR 122 A Vibrant Arts Community Live at University of Toledo: A Six-Year Study
Jennifer Rockwood
Katherine Abu-Abasi
Director, FYE Arts Living Learning Community
University of Toledo

This poster session will highlight the continued success of the Arts Living-Learning Community and its students who enroll in the Arts Living Learning Forum Interdisciplinary Studies 1000 course in both fall and spring semesters. This one-credit-hour class meets once a week and not only fulfills the University of Toledo’s core requirements but also helps first-year students explore their interests in the arts and see how all the branches—music, visual arts, acting, film, creative writing—are connected. Because the course size is kept small, students can debate with others, share their ideas and perspectives and ask questions without getting lost in a sea of faces in a big lecture hall. At the end of the year students produce films that characterize their first-year of college.

PA 123 Relationships: The Key to Student Success
Paula Hixenbaugh
Professor of Psychology
University of Westminster

At the University of Westminster, a large metropolitan university in London, the Widening Participation Survey Group has developed an online survey of all first-year students. The online survey provides information about the students’ perception of their university experience. It also includes a number of standardized psychometric scales which allow the investigation of health and mental health, coping, social and academic integration. The analysis provides information on the variables leading to student success in the first year. This session will explore the data.

PA 124 Appreciative College Instruction: A Positive Approach to Teaching First-Year Seminar Courses
Jennifer Bloom
Clinical Associate Professor and Director of the Higher Education and Student Affairs Master’s Degree Program
Claire Robinson
Assistant Director of the Academic Centers for Excellence (ACE)
University of South Carolina

Appreciative College Instruction (ACI) is the creation of a positive classroom culture that empowers students and teachers to build on their own strengths and experiences, realize their full potentials, and meet specific learning outcomes. Based on the theory of Appreciative Inquiry, ACI is the practical application of six phases—Disarm, Discover, Dream, Design, Deliver, and Don’t Settle—providing a positive framework for college-level courses. This session will demonstrate how ACI can be used in first-year seminar courses and highlight its previous application to a U101 academic recovery course.

PA 125 Involving Peer Advisors to Provide Proactive Advising and Outreach
Scott Bennett
Associate Director, Discovery/New Student Programs
Lisa Bowker
Academic Support Coordinator, Discovery/New Student Programs
Binghamton University

This presentation aims to assist student affairs and academic affairs personnel in employing proactive advising and outreach at their institution through the uses of peer academic advisors. In addition, we will discuss examples of how proactive advising utilizing peers reaches students who would not otherwise seek student support services. Participants will learn how to effectively utilize the invaluable talent pool (e.g., peer advisors, GAs, and interns) available to them, despite recent budget cuts.

PA 126 FY Glee: Making the Music Video…Without a Budget!
Rod Santos
University of California, Berkeley
Boyana Barbula
Systems Coordinator, IT
University of California, Berkeley

Sacramento State’s “FY Glee” music video debuted this summer at Orientation to rave reviews and was an instant online hit. This session will describe the process of producing a video from music selection, story design, recording vocals, and legal considerations to camera equipment, choreography, and film editing. Learn how the peer mentors and 150 personnel completed this project without a budget and how you can use music video as a promotional tool for your FYE program!

PA 127 An Innovative, Modular Approach to the First-Year Experience: Teaching FYE Outside the Traditional Academic Schedule
Maxine Fawcett-Yeske
Course Director for FYE and Academic Advisor
United States Air Force Academy

Distinct among institutions of higher learning, service academies such as the United States Air Force Academy (USAFA) must tailor FYE programs to an environment that combines academics, military training, and physical development. FYE at USAFA presents fourteen modules unfolding over a year’s time. Conducted outside the traditional academic schedule, this approach has raised cadets’ level of achievement and offers a model relevant and applicable to institutions exploring creative ways of delivering a dynamic first-year curriculum.

College students prefer to learn from their peers, and students at Utah Valley University have developed College Survival 101. These monthly seminars cover a broad range of topics from planning to test taking and other survival tips every student should know. This session, presented by students, will provide information and data needed to help your institution implement a similar seminar to benefit your students.

The second of two related programs, this session provides an overview of the effectiveness of common first-year policies and practices implemented on college campuses using data from students, senior administrators, and faculty members on four-year campuses. This session will help administrators identify multiple internal organizational mechanisms to improve their students’ first college year success.
This session will explore Rock Valley College's efforts to improve services to first-year students by developing a method to monitor student academic experiences by grouping students into cohorts at the beginning of the semester. In addition, RVC's institutional research department has created a detailed data gathering and reporting process, supplying information to assist with making decisions that improve the College's services to first-year students.

135 Supporting First-Year Success Through Global Learning Communities and Web-Based Technology: The UTEP and Communities and Web-Based Success Through Global Learninging

Thenral Mangadu
Lecturer
The University of Texas at El Paso

A global learning community (GLC), linking courses and students from different countries and cultures, offers a space for entering students to achieve transitional goals while better understanding intercultural connections. Since 2009, The University of Texas at El Paso has linked a first-year seminar with a comparably-themed course at Victoria University in Melbourne, Australia. This session examines how the GLC's multicultural interactions develop students' cultural sensitivity, preparation to understand global issues, and interest in study abroad.

136 First-Year College Students' Literacy Development and Need for Cognition: A Replication Study Using Longitudinal Data

Ryan Padgett
Assistant Director of Research, Grants, and Assessment

Cindy Kilgo
Graduate Research Assistant
National Resource Center for the First-Year Experience & Students in Transition, University of South Carolina

Higher education’s reliance and dependence on non-replicated research may create inaccurate assessments on the impacts of the college experience across new and emerging student learning outcomes, including inquiry learning. Using data from the Wabash National Study of Liberal Arts Education (WNS), this presentation replicates Bray, Pascarella, and Pierson’s (2004) examination on the dimensions of literacy development within higher education and further examines how literacy activities—reading and writing during college—predict students’ need for cognition.

137 How Soon is Too Soon? Beginning the Advising Process Months Before Students Begin Classes

David Henriques
Shippensburg University

At Shippensburg University, the Office of Placement Testing and the Office of Advisor Training fall under the auspices of the School of Academic Programs and Services. This presentation will highlight the benefits of having these interconnected offices falling under a common school—the 75-80 percent of incoming first-year students required to test gain access to curricular and policy information beyond what a typical placement testing office may be able to offer.

138 Electronic Portfolios and First-Year Residential Students: Let the Learning Begin!

Sandra Nadelson
Associate Professor, Director of Student Services in College of Health Sciences
Louise Nadelson
Assistant Professor, College of Education
Boise State University

Electronic portfolios have many benefits to both higher educational institutions and students. This session will focus on how e-portfolios can be used to assist students at all levels to be active and reflective learners. Attendees will be given information on the pros and cons of e-portfolios. In addition, practical tips on how to create and use e-portfolios with first-year students will be offered during this session.

139 Reading, Writing, and Rithmetic: Common Reading + Learning Communities = Impact

Jim Pukrop
Senior Assistant Director and Coordinator of Learning Communities
Jaclyn Palm
Assistant Director, SATS
Purdue University

Common reading programs at educational institutions nationwide are gaining traction and providing a common academic and intellectual experience for students. Forging an intentional partnership between a common reading program and learning communities can create increased student and faculty engagement. This roundtable discussion will focus on how a partnership with learning communities can enhance a common reading program and share ideas about how to create and maintain that partnership.

140 Staying Mission Focused With Your Residential First-Year Experience Program: A Look Into Western Carolina PEAKS

Stephanie Sue Helmers
Assistant Director for Residence Life
Laura Ansley
Resident Director
Brian Boyer
Western Carolina University

Western Carolina University invites you to learn about a residential first-year experience program, Western Carolina PEAKS. While first-year student retention rates served as a major impetus behind the introduction of the program, it has since been broadened to serve a variety of issues facing first-year students. This session will present a history of the program while focusing specifically on five major topics: student intervention strategies, programming, staffing, collaboration, and the importance of regular program evaluations.

141 Effective Practices for Basic Skills Students: Lessons Learned from the California Basic Skills Initiative

Joyce Bishop
Student Success Professor, Basic Skills Coordinator
Coast Community College District

This session will include a brief overview of the 26 effective practices that were determined from a California research project which reviewed 250 studies of basic skills students. Several specific activities will be demonstrated that have been shown to strengthen the learning skills of basic skills students.

142 Purdue Promise: A Multifaceted Approach to Helping Students Transition to and Succeed in College
A701
Jenna Seabold
Senior Assistant Director of Student Access, Transition, and Success Programs
Yvonne Smith
Associate Director of Student Access, Transition, and Success Programs
Purdue University
Providing students with financial assistance is essential in helping them access higher education. Recent findings have indicated that personal support is equally important in helping students succeed in college. So, in fall 2009, Purdue University implemented a financial, academic, and social four-year support program for low-income and first generation college students from the state of Indiana. The session will highlight the positive outcomes associated with this integrated approach to supporting students.

Undergraduate Education

This session shares preliminary findings associated with a national survey that collected comprehensive data about efforts to enhance student success and retention across the undergraduate continuum. Distributed in fall 2010 to regionally accredited four-year colleges and universities in the United States by the John N. Gardner Institute, the findings augment the robust knowledge base about first-year programs with data about the prevalence of and outcomes associated with success initiatives for sophomores, juniors, seniors, and transfer students.

Associate Provost of Enrollment Management and General Studies
Gallaudet University

Gail Summer
Dean of Academic Programs and Faculty Development
Ferrum College

Marilyn Kurata
Director, Core Curriculum Enhancement
University of Alabama Birmingham

Do you struggle to use assessment data to create change? This presentation explores three campus’ use of assessment, actions created, and outcomes achieved. The first institution created a common time where all students and faculty/staff can attend activities in order to build out-of-class engagement, the second institution created a conference for first-year students to improve connections, and the third institution worked to create community and campus identity. Come learn how to use assessment date to make positive changes.

CI 146 How to Make Your Common Reading Flourish from Beginning to Success!
A705
Julie Fisher
Program Coordinator
The University of Texas at San Antonio

This session will explore what The University of Texas at San Antonio has successfully done over the past seven years to bridge the gap between student affairs and academic affairs: the summer common reading experience. This session will also cover how to get a common reading program started, what makes the program flourish and how to get faculty to incorporate the book in your first-year course. Come learn how to carry the common reading experience out of the classroom.

CI 147 The Implementation of a First-Year Mentoring Program

Matt Trainum
Director, Guide to Personal Success Program
Nicholas Sampogna
Program Coordinator, Academic Success Initiatives
The George Washington University

Come learn about the successes and challenges of establishing The Guide to Personal Success (GPS) program at George Washington University (GW). The program is designed to establish a connection between first-year students and members of the GW community. Each student is partnered with a GPS guide who helps him or her navigate the University in both academic and social settings, helping students make the transition from high school senior to first-year college student. Now in its third year, the program has added intervention and expanded assessment methods. Come learn how to start a similar program on your campus.

Kennesaw State University

Kennesaw State University recently investigated factors affecting students’ successful transition from high school to college, their retention, and their satisfactory progress to graduation. Factors negatively affecting success include course availability, working too many hours, and personal/family responsibilities that interfere with timely navigation of the college environment. Factors positively affecting success are effective advising, early intervention, proper preparation, and multi-faceted, targeted first-year programming. Results of this investigation and proposed next steps for improving student success will be discussed in this session.

Through a first-year advising assessment, Drexel University learned that students were not using advising services, a problem that could quickly become a retention issue. These findings pushed the University to plan and implement a multifaceted first-year outreach plan that begins in June and continues through the year. The University’s assessment indicates that the new plan worked. Presenters in this session will share the University’s plan and implementation process, the assessment results, and plans to extend into the sophomore year.

How Overwhelmed Are Today’s First-Year College Students? A Close Look at the Data
M302
Rob Major
Associate Dean
Kate Tippo
Program Manager
Babson College

Conventional wisdom is that college students are busier and more overwhelmed than ever before. They are committed to a myriad of activities such as community service, organized sports, technology and jobs. These commitments can impact the college experience in positive and negative ways. This session will focus on the trends in the national survey data to determine to what extent this phenomenon is true and how it is impacting the lives of first-year college students.

Incorporating Career Development Skills into the First-Year Seminar
M303
Ann Blasick
Assistant Director, Internship Program
Steven Girardot
Director of Success Programs

Real-world work experience in the form of internships and co-ops is becoming an increasingly important factor in a student’s post-graduation career success. It is critical that students begin as early as their first year to develop the skills needed to be successful in finding positions that will enhance their educational experience. This session will discuss how Georgia Tech’s first-year seminar course, GT1000, incorporates career development skills within an extended orientation seminar format.

Evidence has shown that strong student-staff relationships lead to increased retention and student success. In light of this, Bard College developed an innovative, seminar-style approach to orientation where new students engage in learning about their environment in small groups co-led by Peer Counselors (RAs) and staff. Topics include developing residential communities, classroom power dynamics, campus expectations, drugs and alcohol, and safety, among others. Students learn through readings, group projects, field trips and interactive group play.

What We Can Do To Increase College Completion Rates?

Community colleges serve the students most “at-risk” of not completing their goals, including the most financially disadvantaged and first-generation college students. Many enter college underprepared; for many, English is not their first language; others attend part-time to accommodate work schedules and/or family responsibilities. Returning students, who have been away from an academic environment for a while, may be intimidated and may need active support if they are to succeed. There are many pressures on these students and a variety of forces working against their success. It is important for colleges to focus on support mechanisms, starting early in their first year. Financial aid, developmental education programs, college success skills classes, learning communities, and other first-year experiences can make the difference between success and failure. Four-year institutions and community colleges must collaborate to move more of these students into baccalaureate programs and to help them overcome the many obstacles they face.

4th Annual Undergraduate Student Fellowship Award Recipients

These five undergraduate students were selected from a diverse pool of fellowship applicants by a special committee composed of staff from the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition. As a group, these students are actively involved on their respective campuses in first-year experience programs, and they have demonstrated a desire to learn more about first-year students, and issues and services related to this population. They aspire to not only enhance student life on their current campus, but to influence first-year students as professionals as well.

To Read or Not to Read: Making the First-Year Summer Reading Relevant

Tony Kemp
Associate Director, Office of Academic and Advising Services
Mercer University

Should we have a summer reading? If so, what should it be? What do we do with it once we have it? Since first-year advisors and advising offices are often charged with implementing key components of a summer reading, the session will review Mercer University’s comprehensive approach to Mercer University’s successful summer reading program. Objectives of the session include reviewing ways in which the summer reading initiative is promoted, discussing the first-year students summer reading opportunities, and highlighting the creative and effective ways Mercer uses the text during the first year. Examples of fun new student orientation and first-semester programs advisors can use will be provided.
161 The Potential Power of the First-Year Experience Course: Holistic Outcomes & Systemic Impact

Joe Cuseo
Professor Emeritus, Psychology
Marymount College

The first-year seminar may appear to many as nothing more than a single circumscribed course taken by first-year students in their first term of college. However, an intentionally designed first-year seminar has the capacity to function as much more than a “band aid.” It can take on the broader properties of an educational program with the potential to exert pervasive and enduring effects which include holistic student development and systemic organizational change. This session will explore the intentionally designed first-year seminar.

162 Using Direct Measures of Assessment to Inform and Improve Our Approaches to Information Literacy

Dan Friedman
Director of University 101 Programs
Paul Millard
Graduate Assistant, University 101 Programs
University of South Carolina

This presentation will highlight various approaches to covering information literacy in the first-year seminar and will explore the development of a strategy to assess information literacy using direct measures. Presenters will share factors that were considered in creating a methodology, what they learned from the assessment, and what they did with the information to help instructors better achieve this course outcome. By sharing lessons learned and challenges faced, participants should gain clarity of feasible ways to collect and use assessment data. Sample materials, including copies of the pre/post test, will be provided.

Director of Student Activities
Queens University of Charlotte

The goal of the Agents for Campus Engagement (ACE) program is to ensure new first-year students connect with appropriate resources while establishing meaningful interpersonal relationships with Queens’ staff, which will increase student engagement and improve retention. The spirit of the program is to connect students with professionals who are empowered to assist students and who themselves are linked to a network of available resources to help students.
164  Transforming a First-Year Leadership Program for High-Achieving Students into a Multi-Year Experience
Brian Wooten
Director
Phillip Poskus
Program Coordinator
Christie Pugh
Program Coordinator
Ken Hill
Nancy Prochaska
Professor of Management
Kennesaw State University
In fall 2009, Kennesaw State University started the President’s Emerging Global Scholars Program for high-achieving, first-year students to develop global leadership skills and foster applications for nationally prestigious scholarships. Now recruiting for its third cohort, the program has expanded to a multi-year experience with international civic engagement each year. This presentation will highlight the multi-year pedagogy, best practices gleaned from assessment, and provide student reflection.

165  Social Networking Websites as a Tool for Student Transitions Within the First-Year Seminar
M109
Ronald Kovach
Assistant Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs
Jessica Fish
Kathryn Jones
David Nalbone
Associate Professor, Behavioral Sciences
Purdue University Calumet
This session will focus on a study exploring the role of Facebook in creating virtual learning communities within the first-year seminar. Academic and student affairs at Purdue University Calumet purposefully used Facebook in conjunction with the university’s portal to increase virtual learning communities to help connect students with peers and faculty. Researchers are measuring whether those students connected within the University’s virtual network transition more smoothly, persist in great numbers, and rate overall University satisfaction higher than those in the control group.

166  An In-Depth Look at DFW Rates in a Study Skills Intensive First-Year Seminar
M104
Rebecca Campbell
Director, Academic Transition Programs
Margot Saltonstall
Assessment Coordinator, Student Affairs
Melissa Welker
Project Director, Student Learning Center
Erin Grisham
Director, Educational Support Services
Northern Arizona University
Compiling data across multiple sections, the relationship between DFW rates in a three-credit study skills intensive first-year seminar and course performance (attendance, assignment submission and assignment performance, GPA, retention, academic standing, controlling for entry characteristics (high school GPA and SAT/ACT) will be presented. Session participants will engage in discussions related to how trends in DFW rates should impact course policies and practices including pedagogy, attendance, acceptance of late work, and test make-ups. Participants also will discuss strategies for providing early feedback, intervention and communication.

167  Brooklyn College Students Take on the Future of the Gowanus Canal
M105
Brett Branco
Assistant Professor of Earth and Environmental Sciences
Brooklyn College
The Brooklyn College Learning Community initiative called for robust interdisciplinary instruction and increased community engagement. In response, two professors created an integrated learning community that employs scenario planning, a methodology for imagining the future by understanding the past. This session will explore how students in the learning community applied scenario planning to document the history of possible futures for the Gowanus Canal neighborhood in Brooklyn, New York.

168  Sustaining First-Year Seminar Faculty
M106/107
Judith Lysaker
Associate Professor
Angela Hofstetter
Lecturer
James Keating
Instructor, First-Year Seminar Program and English Department
Butler University
In this session, participants will have the opportunity to discuss ways in which colleges and universities can systemically support faculty who teach first-year students. A model for developing and sustaining first-year faculty will be offered by the roundtable discussion leaders. Participants will then discuss and debate this model and subsequently create models suitable for their institutions. These models will be shared within the whole group, and action plans will be developed.

169  FYE Peer Educators: It’s About Their Learning, Too!
M301
Associate Director of Residence Life
Furman University
Many first-year experience programs use peer educators to provide new students with guidance and support that is crucial for their successful transition to college. Greater attention has been given to the impact peer educator programs have on first-year students than the peer educators serving in them. This roundtable session offers participants the opportunity to discuss the development of peer educator programs that intentionally define the learning experience for peer educators and assesses their learning and development.
Critical Thinking Strategies for the “NOW” Generation

Timothy Walter
Dean of Academic & Student Services
Lisa Nemitz
Faculty Member
Oakland Community College

This session will focus on presenting a validated instructional program that focuses on the development of critical thinking strategies for the “NOW” generation of students. Between 1979-2010, the presenters developed and provided instruction in basic cognitive and behavioral critical thinking and learning strategies to students worldwide who were enrolled in first-year seminar courses, traditional liberal arts courses, and academic support courses. Participants in this session will learn validated strategies by which instructors can engage the “NOW” generation of students in interactive classroom exercises that facilitate the learning of critical thinking strategies that have been adapted for this new generation of students.

Developing the Developmental Semester

Eugene McAvoy
Dean of Academic Services and First-Year Programs
Carolyn Strickland
Assistant Vice President for Academic Services
Pennsylvania College of Technology

The developmental semester was designed to allow students requiring developmental work in math, writing, and reading to attend college full-time while concentrating solely on their developmental needs. Despite the commitment of disproportionately significant resources, data suggested that their retention and academic performance were well below those of their peers. This session explores how Pennsylvania College of Technology used data from “first touch” through the completion of the developmental semester to meet student needs.

Hitching Your Wagon to the Right Star: A Case Study in Collaboration

Lea Susan Engle

Learning and Outreach Librarian, Assistant Professor
Texas A&M University

Do more and spend less. This is the charge from many higher education administrators. How do we reach out to our students with little or no money and overworked staff members? The answer is through collaboration. Texas A&M has a very successful extended orientation program, and through a clear letter of intent, networking, and persistence, the library became a part of this unique experience. Learn how to get your foot in the door with stellar programs in your community!

Appreciative Advising

Jennifer Bloom
Clinical Associate Professor
University of South Carolina

This session will focus on providing an overview of an exciting movement within the academic advising community called Appreciative Advising. The presenter will first define the terms academic advising and Appreciative Advising and look at the important role that advising plays in student success. The six phases of Appreciative Advising—Disarm, Discover, Dream, Design, Deliver, and Don’t Settle—will be defined. Participants will not only learn what each phase means, but they will also have the opportunity to learn how to implement each of these phases.

Empowering Student Interdependence Through Semester-Long Small Groups

A702
Jo Anne Cripe
Career & Life Management Faculty
Butte Community College

Structured small group work, when well managed, has positive outcomes for both students and teachers. Teachers wishing to harness the power of group work need to know how to establish and maintain a cooperative, interdependent classroom. Come learn how building semester-long small groups in your classes will help students learn meaningful interdependence skills. Hear research supporting teacher-determined small group make-up, strategies for managing dynamics, and impressive relational and student success outcomes.

Engaging Faculty in Shaping Academic Expectations for First-Year Students

A703
Chris Caplinger
Georgia Southern University

Faculty everywhere report that entering college students don’t have realistic academic expectations. Moreover, national surveys reveal that many first-year students don’t feel their institutions do a good job of communicating those expectations. This session explores how Georgia Southern University addresses this problem through a faculty-led initiative called “Conversations with Professors” that takes place the day before classes begin. The session will conclude with a discussion about what institutions can do to better instill accurate academic expectations for new students.

Bring the Bling: Engaging Students Through Varied and Dynamic Teaching

Brad Garner
Assistant Dean for Teaching and Learning
Indiana Wesleyan University

There is always a need to provide learning experiences that engage our students. Sometimes this task is undertaken in the midst of competing distractions that lure student attention in any number of directions. This session is designed to provide participants with a variety of quick and easy teaching tools that can be implemented across a variety of disciplines. These techniques were selected based upon their “bling” value, the level at which they can draw an immediate response from students. Participants will learn at least 10 new strategies during this session.

Student Leaders Take the Lead on Building a Peer Mentoring Program

Stephanie Waryasz
Peer Mentor

Southern Connecticut State University

Since 2007, student leaders at Southern Connecticut State University had been asking for a peer mentoring program for first-year students. Finally, in 2009, the University let some student leaders take the lead. This session will focus on what happened when nine outstanding orientation ambassadors created a peer mentoring program, building important bridges between faculty and student affairs and greatly enhancing the campus experience for first.

CT 180 Helping First-Term Online Students Learn to Learn
A708
Christine Halem
Professor, Department of Professional Studies
Michelle Fischer
Kaplan University

Learning-to-learn is a not a new concept; however, it is becoming more and more important as education moves to online. Without the constant presence of the teacher, students are called on to manage their own learning experiences. In recent years, too, more nontraditional students have returned to college. First-term students are often adults with family and work responsibilities. In addition, in today’s knowledge society, one of the most important skills that students can learn is the ability to retrieve knowledge. Given these facts, the competencies direct one’s own learning becomes a necessary skill for both college and career success. This presentation will explore the tenets of self-directed learning and offer suggestions that teachers can use in their practices to encourage students to become independent learners.

Director of First-Year Experiences
James Penven
Associate Director of Residence Life
Marc Zaldivar
Director, Electronic Portfolio Initiative
Therese Lovegreen
Associate Director, University Academic Advising Center
Karen Watson

Director of Academic Support, Liberal Arts & Human Sciences
Virginia Tech

This session will highlight a new university-wide initiative at Virginia Tech called Pathways to Success and is described from the planning through implementation and assessment stages. Pathways programs are an indication of Virginia Tech’s commitment to providing support to first-year students and institutionalizing that commitment. Programs are based in academic units, involve multiple partners across the university including student affairs, grounded in best practices literature and essential learning outcomes, incorporate e-Portfolios for pedagogical and assessment purposes and are rigorously assessed.

CT 182 Using Summer Bridge to Engage High-Risk Students
M104
Beth Bir
Fayetteville State University

Presenters will share the facets involved in using a summer bridge program to engage high-risk students with their university experience. The session will include specific suggestions for structuring the program, some of which are applicable to the academic year as well. Multiple methods of assessment and resulting data focusing on student success as well as long-term progression and retention will also be given.

CT 183 Defining FYS Learning Outcomes That Are Distinctive, Implementable, and Assessable Across Disciplines
Laura Malloy
Kinh Ho Chan
Johanna Mitchell
Assistant Professor of Education
Priscilla Wightman
Associate Professor of Accounting
Hartwick College

This roundtable discussion will explore strategies for defining focused and institutionally valued learning outcomes for first-year seminars. With funding from a three-year Mellon Foundation grant, the Hartwick College faculty is redesigning first-year seminars. One persistent challenge has been identifying primary objectives and creating a common set of first-year seminar learning outcomes that are distinctive, implementable and assessable across disciplines.

184 Do I Have To Take That? Increasing Efforts to Bypass the First-Year Experience

M301

Chris Benson

Nicole Nagy
Eastern Michigan University

Traditional-aged, first-year college students are entering higher education with more credits than ever before. Dual enrollment, Advanced Placement credits, and early/middle colleges are just a few of the ways students and their parents are using to reduce the full-time, undergraduate college experience to fewer than four years. How are higher education institutions responding to this trend? What impact does this shift have on programs such as orientation and structures such as learning communities? Come to this roundtable session ready to share your experiences, concerns, and ideas.

185 Academic Coaching in a FYE Course: A Collaborative Effort

M302

Chad Bennett
Assistant Professor/Program Counselor
Gregory Ochoa
Assistant Professor/Director, Academic Success Program
Karen Hamilton
Transition Counselor
Anthony Calvario
Counseling Assistant
Shippensburg University

This session highlights a pilot program between the Department of Academic Services and the special education graduate program at Shippensburg University. FYE students were paired with graduate students studying special education who served as academic coaches, providing tutoring, academic monitoring, and the teaching of specific skills aimed at increasing the likelihood of academic success. The FYE students completed the LASSI assessment tool at the onset, and then completed 10 weekly meetings, which started during week five of the semester.

186 Data Results from a Longitudinal of First-Year Students

M304

Beth Lingren Clark
Director of Orientation & First-Year Programs
Laura Coffin Koch
Associate Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education
University of Minnesota - Twin Cities

At this session, presenters from the University of Minnesota will share their results from a longitudinal study of first-year students which began in 2007. Overall, this study focuses on first-year student success and retention. Presenters will discuss the assessment plan, methodology, and most importantly, the results. The results of this assessment plan are used to influence first-year program content and delivery, making an impact on the student experience.

Extended Session – First-Year Student Panel

4:15 p.m. - 5:45 p.m. A601/A602

Student Voices: Our Turn to Listen

Moderator: Richard Mullendore

Professor, College Student Affairs Administration
University of Georgia
Fellow, National Resource Center for the First-Year Experience & Students in Transition

Join us for this opportunity for conference attendees to hear from the ones we serve. First-year students from local area colleges will be the panelists for this open forum. What are the issues facing these students in their first year of college? What has worked...or not? What suggestions do they have for improving the first year experience? Attendees will be able to ask questions during this highly interactive session. As faculty and staff, we spend a lot of time, energy and effort talking about students; this session will provide us the opportunity to hear their voices.

It seems that many faculty and staff today struggle with incongruities in their academic lives. Is it possible to sustain individual spirituality, authenticity, wholeness, and self-renewal in the academy in the 21st century? Do our institutional cultures fuel incongruence? In this session, participants will be encouraged to think deeply about their own beliefs and values and consider how their institutional cultures foster authenticity or perhaps generate intra-personal conflict. Discussion at this session will revolve around these issues.
Plan ▶ Take Action ▶ Get Results

More than ever, your campus needs an evidence-backed plan for new students.

Create a plan that:

▶ sets priorities for precious first-year and/or transfer education resources and personnel

▶ integrates first-year and/or transfer silos and rewards collaboration over competition

▶ eliminates costly duplication of programs and achieves greater efficiencies

▶ engages faculty in critical first-year and/or transfer reform efforts

▶ provides highly cost effective advisory support led by the nation’s experts on enhancing new student success

▶ is backed by evidence and correlated with significant retention gains

Using Program Audit Data to Enhance the First-Year Experience

A701
Rebecca Campbell
Director, Academic Transition Programs
Erin Grisham
Director, Educational Support Services
Margot Saltonstall
Assessment Coordinator, Student Affairs

Data from a program audit was used to compile four First Year Profiles. The four profiles included a directory of programs, a cross-walk of served students to the institution’s demographics, a cross-walk of the delivery timeframe and the first year calendar, and a cross walk of the program’s Student Learning Outcomes and the Institution’s First Year Learning Outcomes. The First Year Profiles were then used in focus groups to identify gaps and floods in programming, broad questions and a set of recommendations for enhancing our first year experience.

Transitioning into the Major: Career Planning Courses and Career Decision Self-Efficacy

A702
Mary Morsch
Associate Director of Career and Academic Planning
Heather Patterson
Career and Academic Advisor / IS 202 Coordinator
James Madison University

A significant challenge facing first year students is the development of an integrated academic and career plan, particularly for students without a major. Career planning courses are common, but their impact on student learning is not often measured. James Madison University assessed the impact of a career planning course designed primarily for exploratory freshmen on career decision-making self-efficacy, with significant results yielding insights about the course, students and strategies for assessing other decision making interventions.

Continuing Innovations in the First-Year Seminar: Evidence from the 2009 National Survey of First-Year Seminars

A703
Ryan Padgett
Assistant Director of Research, Grants, and Assessment
University of South Carolina

This presentation provides academic professionals, student affairs practitioners, and researchers with detailed analyses of the first-year seminar using national, institution-level data from the 2009 National Survey of First-Year Seminars. The findings suggest significant disparities exist across various institutional controls with regards to how the first-year seminar is defined, administered, taught, and assessed. Additionally, the data reveal how institutions continue to organize the seminar into a practical and intentional educational program.

The Best Dissertation is a Done Dissertation

A705
Jean Henscheid

For several years the national First-Year Experience conference held a roundtable for working professionals also attempting to conduct research for and write dissertations. This session draws on success stories from those discussions and from research-based best practices for finishing this monumental task. Whether you have yet to enroll in your first doctoral course or have finished collecting data, this session will help you understand what it takes to complete the best dissertation (the done one).

Creating Powerful Partnerships for Success: Utilizing a Single Peer Mentor Team Across Multiple FYE and Retention-Driven Initiatives

A706
Sarah Whitley
Longwood University

Restructuring of the Office of First Year Experience and Peer Mentor program at Longwood University has provided a unique co-curricular experience for new students through the continuous use of a student peer leader team during five linked first year experience initiatives. These programs include Orientation & Registration, the 1839 Experience, New Lancer Days, the First Year Reading Experience and Longwood Seminar. This has established university wide investment in the first year experience and extensive collaboration across academic disciplines and divisions (Academic Affairs, Student Affairs, Student Success) while aiding in student persistence.

Maintaining Our Commitment to Native Student Success

A707
Colleen Angaiak
Academic Advisor
Olga Skinner
Academic Advisor
University of Alaska Fairbanks

Rural Student Services (RSS) is a unique department at the University of Alaska Fairbanks that provides culturally responsive advising to Alaska Native and rural Alaskan students. For over 40 years RSS advisors have developed a variety of strategies to assist these students as they make the transition to college life. We will discuss these strategies and how providing culturally responsive advising promotes success and retention.

“iPads for All”: Innovation and Application in a Learning Community

A708
Jill Trites
Senior Teaching Specialist
M.S. Jensen

Nearly 450 first-year students enrolled in the First Year Experience program in the College of Education & Human Development at the University of Minnesota received iPads as part of one of the largest research-based iPad pilot projects in the nation. This session will provide a preliminary report on the use of the iPads and students’ responses to them in a learning community featuring a public speaking class and a general biology course.
Mehrabian defined immediacy as the degree of perceived physical or psychological closeness between people. Characteristics of this include smiling, nodding, eye-contact, and vocal tone. Yet, even as seasoned instructors engage in these behaviors, student attention turns to cell phones and other distractions. This session’s purpose is to identify and discuss very specific immediacy-seeking behaviors which could help instructors better enter the competition they may face against cell phones, laptops, and Facebook.

Non-Cognitive Assessment and Intervention Strategies to Promote Student Engagement and Retention

Postsecondary institutions are increasingly recognizing the value of early assessment of students’ non-cognitive abilities. FYE instructors, advisors and student services personnel can intervene with students to build non-cognitive abilities and structure classroom and advising activities to increase students’ engagement with the institution. The presenters of this session will outline non-cognitive assessment methods, systematic student feedback approaches and comprehensive efforts that encourage students’ active steps to build skills critical for success in college.

Keeping Students in College: How Do we Increase Retention Rates?
M104
Jeff Doyle
Dean for Student Learning and Engagement
Baylor University

With the increased attention on accountability and results in higher education and advent of performance-based funding, retention has taken on a critical importance. Attendees will learn foundational theories of retention, best practices in retention, and professional sources of current information on retention. Additional attention will be given to retention technology, collaboration with key partners, and easy tools for benchmarking. Attendees will be encouraged to share their best practices in student success.

198 This Ain’t Your Grandma’s Library: Programs and Promotions that Communicate to the Millennial Student
A701
Rebeca Beفس
First-Year Experience Librarian
Jill Wurm
Information Officer - Public Relations/Marketing
Wayne State University
Capturing the attention of today’s millennial student requires engaging activities as well as innovative design and persuasive language geared directly to the first-year experience. This interactive session will feature new ideas for outreach programs, classroom experiences and communication efforts that stand out from the crowd. From common reading experiences, to orientation activities, to videos, to the residence halls, the library at Wayne State University and its staff has experienced it all.

199 Active Peer Mentoring: Strategies for Engaging With Resistant Students
A702
Fred Pinnegar
Bryce Bunting
Program Manager, Freshman Mentoring
Brigham Young University
It is axiomatic that students “don’t do optional,” but mandatory first-year programs immediately generate resistance from many students. Passive peer mentoring attracts few resistant students and rarely reaches those who need it the most. This session will explore the literature on “motivational interviewing” and working with ODD adolescents (Oppositional Defiant Disorder) that suggests basic strategies that can be used in an active peer mentoring approach to work through resistance and productively engage all students.

200 Charting a Career Path: The Impact of Required First-Year Internships at Endicott College
Beverly Dolinsky
Vice President of Student Affairs
Sara Quay
Dean of Education and Coordinator of the Honor’s Program
Endicott College
Research examining the importance of career development within the first year has clearly indicated that opportunities to reflect on one’s career aspirations have numerous academic and social benefits. Presenters in this session will discuss how Endicott College requires all incoming first-year students to complete INT100 Internship I, an exploratory and experientially based internship completed in January of the first year of college. This research examines the impact of the first-year internship on students’ academic, career, and social growth.

201 Designing and Implementing a Quality First-Year Program Quickly in Tough Economic Times
A704
Tim Vick
Director, Academic Resource Centers
Becky Corvey
Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs
Macon State College
With overwhelming administrative support and limited resources, Macon State College increased student retention by developing a first-year program in six months. Come learn how this four-year, public institution garnered campus buy-in, recruited and trained instructors, developed curriculum, and created an assessment model in a short time frame. The presenters will discuss methods used, actions taken and policies enacted to quickly meet their goals.

202 New Stories: Transforming Goal-Belief Through the Power of Narrative
A703
Faculty, Student Success Program
Abilene Christian University
Stories are frequently used to help people understand and explore the past, but stories can have an immense impact on a person’s future as well. College instructors can help students craft their own future story by engaging powerful narrative tools to navigate existing challenges. This session will review recent research in the challenges of goal-belief, as well as practical tools for helping students engage imagination, realism, language, and hope toward the construction of a belief-transforming narrative.

203 Peer Power: Mentoring At-Risk Students in the IUPUI Summer Success Academy Program
A707
David Sabol
Senior Lecturer
Jan DeWester
Senior Lecturer
Indiana University–Purdue University, Indianapolis (IUPUI)
The Summer Success Academy (SSA) at IUPUI, an exciting new six-week program, provides approximately 200 conditionally admitted entering students with academic support in math and writing and introduces students to university culture. This presentation will address the overall structure and assessment results of the program and will address the portion of the SSA program that introduces students to the university’s general education goals by using experienced student mentors to facilitate sessions.

204 A Menu of Options: Partnering Student Affairs and Academics for Transition Success
A708
Susan Nanning-Sorensen
Assistant Director of COR/Professor of Theatre Education
Edgewood College
The presenter will share Edgewood College’s experience of partnering student affairs and Academics to develop and implement a new, integrative approach to college transition. Learn the key features of this approach and the many creative sessions that emerged when the College integrated transition issues into its unique entry course for first-year students, COR 1. Attendees will experience hands-on, active participation as they explore sample models of transition sessions that were a part of Edgewood’s courses.

2010-11 Paul P. Fidler Research Grant Recipient
[Paul J. McLoughlin II]
A doctoral candidate at Boston College, McLoughlin has been selected for his study, High-Achieving Low-Income Students: How Low-Income Students on Full Financial Aid are Navigating an Elite College Environment.

The Paul P. Fidler Research Grant is designed to encourage the development and dissemination of knowledge that has the potential to improve the experiences of college students in transition. The grant is named in memory of Dr. Paul P. Fidler, a faculty member at the University of South Carolina, whose pioneering research on student learning and success had a vital impact on work being done to promote the success of all students in transition.

Comprehensive Award Package
The Paul P. Fidler Research Grant award includes a cash stipend, travel to two national conferences, a presentation at a national conference, and priority consideration for publication. Specifically, the grant’s comprehensive award package includes:

- Stipend of $5,000, payable either directly to individual researchers or through the researcher(s)/institution(s). The Center will not pay institutional overhead or indirect costs.
- Travel to the 18th National Conference on Students in Transition, November 2011, in St. Louis, Missouri, at which the award will be presented at the conference luncheon.
- Travel to the 19th National Conference on Students in Transition, November 2012, at which the research findings will be reported.
- Announcement on the National Resource Center web page, listserv, and print publications.
- Priority consideration for publication by the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition.

Eligibility
The Paul P. Fidler Research Grant competition is open to faculty, staff, and graduate students who plan to conduct research on issues of college student transitions. The following individuals are not eligible for the Paul P. Fidler Research Grant and may not be included as part of proposed research teams: National Resource Center staff and fellows; current members of the Center’s National Advisory Board; and students, staff, and faculty of the University of South Carolina system.

Application Procedures
The application and proposal will be available for download at www.sc.edu/fye on April 1, 2011. Completed applications must be received by 11:59 pm EST, July 1, 2011. E-mail: NRCResearch@mailbox.sc.edu

208 Killer Courses: Understanding and Reducing Roadblocks to First-Year Academic Success

M106/107
Betsy O. Barefoot
Vice President and Senior Scholar
Betsy Griffin
Senior Associate Vice President

Most new students experience some “killer courses” within their first year of college. These courses are frequently among those with high first-year student enrollment and by definition have high rates of unsuccessful outcomes (i.e., D, F or Withdrawal). To stimulate discussion, data reflecting the experience of first-year students in the high enrollment courses of 162 institutions will be described. Come and share your institutional experience and perspectives on remedying this pervasive problem.

209 “Firsttransfer” Students: A Roundtable Discussion on Supporting Students Who Enter Our Institutions With Previously Earned Credit

M301
Jamie Brown
Academic Advisor
Shawn Wilson
Central Michigan University

Students are ahead of the game when they enter college with credits from dual enrollment, Advanced Placement, CLEP and International Baccalaureate programs. Advanced class standing has benefits, but it potentially creates challenges in supporting students effectively as “firsttransfers”. This session will explore the impact on retention, registration and requirements for first-year seminars and how, in regards to policies, we can improve communication with prospective students for effective course and program planning for college.

210 Learning Communities Without Borders

M302
Nancy Kelley
Professor and Director of First-Year Academic Learning Communities
Jonathan Yates
Professor, Center for Liberal Education
Villanova University

In the past two years, Villanova University has accelerated its commitment to have each of its five first-year learning communities fully engaged in intellectual and/or cultural experiences off campus, while clearly connecting these activities to key texts taught in the classroom. In this session, presenters will share how outcome measurements have confirmed the significant and rich learning by participating students and have distilled the critical variables by which these events could successfully be adapted to other institutions.

211 Common Reading Programs: Best Practices Brainstorm

M303
Julie Schultz
The Ohio State University

This roundtable session is intended for colleagues to share best practices and new ideas about common reading programs. Some potential discussion topics include book selection processes, composing a selection committee, connection to academic coursework, supplementary programming, creating campus buy-in, funding structures, and project assessment.

212 Midterm GPA: Predictor of Final GPA?

A701
Nancy Casey
Associate Professor of Education and Director of First-Year Experience
St. Bonaventure University

What happens when midterm grades are reported? Does anyone pay attention to them? Should they? Most colleges and universities report midterm grades, at least to first-year students. But is this more than an exercise? We have analyzed five years’ data and will report results that have made us stand up and pay attention. This session will discuss the predictive value of midterm grades and will engage the audience in a discussion of potential interventions.

213 Dawg Camp! Dawg Camp! The Place to Be!

A702
Rick Gray
Assistant Director, Center for Leadership and Service
Maggie Szeman
The University of Georgia

Dawg Camp is an extended orientation program for incoming first-year students at The University of Georgia, sponsored by the Center for Leadership and Service. The session will focus on bridging extended orientation programs on campus to support students through their first year of the college experience. Camp-style orientation programs will be explored, identifying key outcomes that can be used in planning first-year support programs open to all students on a residential campus. Academic courses and transition workshops will be sample programs shared during the session.

214 Intentional Synergy: Purdue’s Student Access, Transition and Success (SATS) Program

Daniel Carpenter
Interim Director
James Pukrop
Senior Assistant Director
Jenna Seabold
Senior Assistant Director
Kasi Jones
Senior Assistant Director
Purdue University

College access and success programs are multiple, varied, and impactful. However, they can be difficult to manage and assess, and can have far less impact when scattered, disjointed, or disconnected. Finding a way to make them intentionally coordinated can be daunting, especially in an environment with no common core curriculum and no university-wide first-year
Implementing First-Year Programs at a Research University

Marilyn Kurata
Director of Core Curriculum Enhancement
University of Alabama at Birmingham

There are particular challenges to implementing a required first-year program across a range of liberal arts and professional programs at a research university. The goal of the University of Alabama at Birmingham was to impose coherence on undergraduate education, promote institutional community, introduce university learning outcomes, and improve student satisfaction and retention. This session will describe the evolution of creative solutions to meet the challenges of implementing a first-year experience at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

Why Do First-Year Commuter Students Struggle With Transitioning to College?

Jennifer Hodges
Greg Dieringer
The University of Akron

Commuter students often have a difficult time “fitting-in” to the campus community since their main contact with other students is in the classroom. Presenters in this session describe an assessment study focused on the factors that predict the early integration of first-year commuter students and which factors make the transition to college more difficult. A practitioner from a predominantly commuter university will discuss her assessment work, practical implications of similar research, and interventions designed using the data.

From the Ground Up: Building a Solid Foundation for New Programs & Initiatives

Dana Keeler Gaucher
Director, Office of Student Academic Success
University of South Carolina

The effectiveness of any new campus enterprise or program is dependent upon multiple factors. New initiatives must be carefully planned, alliances must be formed, and communication must be crafted to represent program goals and objectives. This session will provide a step-by-step action plan to build a lasting foundation for the presenters’ personal experiences and on research regarding student retention, engagement & success.

Give Them a Break: Supporting Students Placed on Academic Suspension

Jane Arrowsmith
Coordinator, Academic Centers for Excellence
University of South Carolina

Many institutions provide early intervention programming for academically deficient first-year students. However, what happens when students aren’t able to recover academically and they’re placed on suspension? It’s important to recognize that even though students are away from campus while suspended, they could be provided programmatic support as part of the institution’s retention efforts. This session’s goal is to provide information about academically suspended first-year students and ideas for supporting these students through the suspension process.

FYE: Much More Than a Class

Michelle Kearns
Director, Student Success and Retention/First-Year Experience
Utah Valley University

The first-year experience at Utah Valley University is much more than a class. Here, FYE includes orientation, a reading program for first-year students, major and career exploration, personalized advocate, learning communities, and much more. Did we mention a class? We have that, too. And upon the development and implementation of a comprehensive first-year experience, Utah Valley University (UVU) has increased retention by 16 percent. Come explore what UVU defines as a first-year experience. Presenters will share some lessons learned as well.
220 Shift Happens: Leveling the Playing Field for the Nontraditional Student
Renée Spence
Assistant Professor of Business
Administrative Technology
Tammy Hinson
Instructor of Learning Support Reading and English
Melissa Harrell
Instructor of Criminal Justice
Sheila McClendon
Instructor of Technical Mathematics
Ann Brannen
Assistant Professor of Technical Mathematics
Bainbridge College

This session will engage participants in the use of 21st century skills to design curricula that meets the needs of nontraditional students. Participants will learn about a professional learning community and its pilot program that addressed the identified needs of college students 25 years of age and older. This program’s framework targeted nontraditional students in their first-year foundation courses at Bainbridge College. Participants evaluated the influence of individual motivational and contextual factors, including demographic and socioeconomic characteristics of adult learners as well as their experience through educational programs with limited 21st century skills.

221 The Evolution of Mathematics Remediation and the Impacts on the First-Year Student
Charles Lam
Developmental Mathematics Coordinator
Terran Felter-Murphy
California State University, Bakersfield

As more students enter college requiring mathematics remediation, universities and colleges must be prepared to help these students succeed and become "college ready." Serving this vulnerable segment of the population is important yet difficult in current financial times. How are colleges and universities managing the number of first-year students requiring math remediation?

222 First-Year Advising at Liberal Arts Colleges: Creating Effective Models for Faculty/Staff Collaboration
Julia Moffitt
First-Year Advisor
Bennington College

This roundtable discussion will focus on how to build a collaborative and holistic advising model in the first college year. The successes and challenges of a dual advising model at a small liberal arts college will be addressed, prompting a discussion of how staff and faculty can effectively work together to build an advising program that meets first-year students’ needs. Participants will be encouraged to share their experiences about first-year advising programs and the challenges of establishing a set of shared goals and expectations for faculty and staff.

223 Enhancing the First-Year Experience of At-Risk Students Through Summer Enrichment Programs
M105
Overtoun Jenda
Associate Provost for Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
Brittany McCullough
Diversity Analyst, Planning and Assessment
Florence Holland
Special Assistant to the Associate Provost for Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
Auburn University

This session will explore the following three residential summer programs implemented at Auburn University main campus: the Summer Enrichment Experience (SEE Auburn) Program, Provost Leadership Undergraduate Scholarship (PLUS) Orientation, and COSAM Summer Bridge programs. These programs are all designed to give at-risk students a head start on their first year. Through courses and workshops, students have an opportunity to improve their academic skills and be ready for first-year courses in the fall.

224 “Jumping” Into the First Year of College Through a Virtual Summer Bridge Program, Early Entrance Experience and Academic Program
Academic Support Center Director
The Pennsylvania State University

Often summer programs and outreach for students is on the chopping block when budgets are cut. This presentation will review the "Jump Start Program" targeted towards developmental students in the areas of math and English. The program is comprised of a summer virtual bridge experience, early entrance experience, and an academic component. Participants will learn about the successes and challenges in implementing a virtual summer program as well as the qualitative and quantitative data results.

225 The Impact of Learning Communities on Women in STEM Fields: The Results of a Qualitative Study
A702
Matthew Pistilli
Senior Assistant Director, Student Access, Transition & Success Programs
Purdue University

Learning communities have long been heralded as a means for increasing student retention and success during the first year of college. This study examined the experiences of seven women majoring in a STEM field who also were in a learning community at Purdue University during their first year of college. This presentation will highlight the outcomes of the study, which indicated a positive impact of being in a learning community, as well as several other lessons about succeeding in college.
First-Year Students in the Public Sphere

Thia Wolf

Samantha Solorzano
FYE Student Director

California State University, Chico

This session provides an overview of Public Sphere Pedagogy, an approach to instruction in first-year courses connecting students’ coursework to specially constructed public settings. Examples include a large-scale town hall featuring first-year students’ research, civic questions, and commitments to civic participation and a large-scale great debate on a local voting issue. The research indicates that students in this curriculum show improved academic and civic engagement scores and better wellness than their counterparts taking traditional courses.

Raising the Bar in Student Success Courses: Expect, Give, and Get

Christine Harrington
Professor, Psychology and Student Success

Alice Picardo
First-Year Experience Director

Middlesex County College

The integration of reading, critical thinking, and information literacy skills into student success courses through the use of actual research from peer-reviewed journals will be described and modeled in this session. Emphasis will be on raising academic expectations while simultaneously providing high levels of support to students and faculty. The beauty of the techniques demonstrated is that they address both content (what student success research tells us) and process (how to access, read, and use information).

Turning Vision into Reality in One Year

A707

Barbara Spies
Director of the First Year Experience Program

Kate Herrick
Associate, Mission & Identity

Jennifer Herrick
Director, Center for Leadership and Involvement

Maria Von Arx
Assistant Director of Residence Life

Cardinal Stritch University

Cardinal Stritch University’s new design for delivery of its first-year experience program was a team effort. Following discussions first held at the Annual First-Year Experience Conference in 2009, members of the faculty, student development staff and mission, and identity staff worked collaboratively to bring the vision to reality. The new program includes a new delivery approach, multiple common experiences, including a common reading and a service project related to the reading. Presenters will explain the process, outcomes and the multiple benefits to the new approach.

It’s All About Teamwork: Integrating the Library Into the First-Year Experience

M109

Daphne Rankin
Associate Vice Provost for Instruction

Donna Coghill
First-Year Student Programs Librarian

Virginia Commonwealth University

Virginia Commonwealth University’s core curriculum provides a seamless learning experience that integrates the resources and services of the Virginia Commonwealth University libraries. The first-year student programs librarian and her team provide consultation services and learning experiences for faculty members and students of the university college. Librarians ensure that students have a better understanding of successful academic research. Examples of the teamwork that has evolved will be discussed in this session.

Course Selection With the Use of an Online Survey: A Small College Initiative

Barbara Boyette
Assistant Academic Dean for Advising and Academic Support

Meagan Jolliffe
Student Success Counselor

Guilford College

To support first-year students in course registration, Guilford College, a small liberal arts institution with 370-420 first-year students annually, implemented an online course selection form. Students completed items about themselves and their course choices for first semester. Academic staff used that information and data from admissions applications to provide students with customized course schedules. This presentation will discuss the process of developing the course selection form and the benefits of the process.

Bridging the Gap: Using Personal Stories to Understand the Early College Experience of At-Risk Students

Kesha Entzminger
Academic Advisor, Academic Success Center

University of South Carolina Aiken

This session explores the early college experiences of academically at-risk first-year students participating in First Pace, a fall semester bridge program at the University of South Carolina Aiken. Specifically, qualitative methods were used to capture personal stories to determine how students in the program perceived the influence of precollege experiences, peers, faculty/staff, and guardians, on their transition into the university environment. Analysis was conducted to determine common themes, perceptions, and experiences of these students.

Uncommon Ideas for Common Reading Programs

Common reading programs help provide incoming students with an intellectual orientation to college or university life. One of the challenges of these programs is engaging students early and sustaining their involvement in the ideas and issues generated by the common text from the moment they enroll through their first college year. This roundtable discussion will invite discussion of uncommon ideas for increasing engagement with the common reading, from the use of social media to partnerships between institutions.

Improving Transition, Retention, and Success for First-Generation Students

Clarice R. Ford
Associate Dean of Student Services, Executive Director of Diversity Center
University of Illinois Springfield

Edwin Mayes
Director of First-Year Experience

Monique Williams
Necessary Steps Coordinator
University of Illinois Springfield

Are you struggling to retain first-generation students? Presenters from two institutions will discuss how they combined peer mentors, first-generation students and an assessment project to improve student success and retention. First, they identify first-generation students who self-report issues not conducive to success, such as poor study skills or poor peer connections. Next, peer mentors or administrators meet with these students to offer support and make referrals to campus resources and then follow-ups are conducted.

Developing First-Year Programs for Online Learners

Melissa Johnson

The number of college students taking online courses continues to explode; in the fall of 2008 more than 4.6 million students took at least one online course. What is the role of first-year programs in distance education? How might first-year programs better serve the online learning population? What might online first year programs look like? Join this roundtable to explore answers to these questions.

R 236 Speed Networking

Karin Ann Lewis
Director, UK Academic Enhancement
University of Kentucky

Stephanie J. Sipp
Undergraduate Research Assistant
University of Kentucky

This workshop will bring together seasoned educators with newer members of the field of higher education. Participants will progress through a sequence of intentionally structured guided discussions relating to relevant issues in college student transitions and the first-year experience. Through multiple rounds of dyad discussions, participants will gain insight and learn from the expertise and experiences of colleagues while responding to constructive questions regarding best practices in the field. Participants will interact with a variety of professionals with a range of experience and expertise so as to reflect upon practical and theoretical issues in the profession and to develop a broader professional network of colleagues and informal mentors for particular aspects of the first-year experience. Participants also will practice the metacommunication skills of articulating theoretical frameworks, thought processes, decision making, and rationale so as to hone research, assessment, and program design for intentional improvement.

Closing Town Meeting

11:45 a.m. - 12:15 p.m.

Atrium Level A601/A602

This concluding session is designed as an open discussion on ideas and information presented at this conference and current issues in the first-year experience. The staff of the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition will facilitate the session and encourage active participation. Of particular interest is what has been learned and where we need to go from here. Please join us.

Transfer Students in Higher Education: Building Foundations for Policies, Programs, and Services That Foster Student Success

Monograph Series No. 54

Mark Allen Polei & Sonya Joseph

Transfer Students in Higher Education presents what we know about transfer students, addresses assumptions and myths about the transfer experience, and explores the changing demographics of this student group. Adopting a student-centered approach, the monograph offers strategies to begin (and continue) the work of serving students and creating transfer-friendly campus environments. Chapter authors explore the issue from the perspective of both sending and receiving institutions and provide research, case studies, and best practices to help institutions meet the challenges of enrollment, orientation, advisement, coordination of services, retention, and graduation of transfer students.

Higher education professionals at all types of institutions need an increased understanding of the transfer experience and access to strategies to ensure the success of this growing student population. Transfer Students in Higher Education provides both. (2011). ISBN 978-1-889-27171-2. $35
