<td>This course is of high interest to students as an upper-level elective for ANTH and WGST. The course materials incorporate basic accessibility features that provide appropriate learning activities and interaction. Online course options for students are increasingly necessary in the context of 1) dwindling classroom space on campus and 2) today’s twenty-first century students who have multiple and competing demands on their time. We anticipate that an online course option for ANTH/WGST 381 will be a particularly-attractive option for student athletes, military students, student parents and students with other direct-care responsibilities, working students, students with disabilities or chronic health issues that make brick-and-mortar classroom attendance difficult, and those who live outside of Columbia.</td>

<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>As the number of Biological Sciences majors with a pre-medical emphasis continues to grow, a course in Medicinal Botany would greatly enhance those students' understanding of the interconnections between plants, their usage in medical treatments, the biochemical pathways induced in humans during such treatments, and the overall relationship of these medically used plants to human health and physiology. Students in the Biological Sciences major are required to complete at least one plant-based BIOL course as a part of their curriculum so offering a course that is tailored to the needs of the pre-medical students in our program would be highly appealing to this demographic of students.</td>

Currently there are few history courses at the 300-400 level that are offered for online instruction, most are survey course that fulfill Carolina Core requirements. Surveys of History majors have indicated they would like to have more 400 level course online for making degree progression and graduate in a timely manner with added flexibility. I enrolled and completed the “Getting Started Teaching Online” course offered by CTE instructor Gloria Washington to learn pedagogical skills and techniques appropriate to 400 level courses to have HIST 420 approved for online instruction.

PSYC-432

Men and Masculinity

Description:

Analysis of and practice in pronunciation and listening comprehension. Prerequisite: C or better in both FREN 209 and FREN 210, or equivalents, or a score of F-6 on the French language placement exam. FS: 12/05/2018. ACAF 2.03: 07/05/2019. CL: 2020.

Justification:

The Linguistics Program does not currently offer any instruction in Phonetics at the undergraduate level (it has one course in Articulatory & Acoustic Phonetics at the graduate level, LING 712). This course would allow undergraduate students of Linguistics to gain training in general and French-language Phonetics at the undergraduate level, helping to create a pathway between the introduction to Phonetics offered in LING 300/301 (the survey course) and graduate-level LING 712 (which some advanced undergraduates opt to take via IS and/or in their final year).

Description:

Historical development of feminist theory and contemporary debates within feminism. CL: 2020.

Justification:

WGST and POLI wish to make WGST 307 available for distributed learning. We wish to retain our face-to-face option for the course, but expand the delivery options available to students by making an online version available as well.
This course provides an overview of psychological, social, physical, and emotional issues related to men's lives. Major topics include: gender construction, men and work, men and health, men in relationships, male sexualities, men in families, and masculinities in the media and popular culture. FS: 12/05/2018. CL: 2020.

Justification:

This proposal has two aims. The first is to bring the title of PSYC 432 into alignment with its current course description as well as its WGST 432 crosslist. The title will be changed from "Men and Masculinity" to "Men and Masculinities." The second aim is to obtain distributed learning delivery authorization for PSYC 432.

A separate proposal has been submitted to obtain this authorization for the crosslisted course WGST 432, as well as to correct a missing PSYC 432 crosslist and update the course description of WGST 432 to bring it into alignment with that for PSYC 432.

RUSS-520 Russian Modernism Arts and Sciences New Course
Description:
Introduction to psychosocial factors in physical activity. Topics include mental health effects of exercise, behavior change theories applied to physical activity, and physical activity determinants and interventions. Cross-listed Course: EXSC 410

Justification:
Change the course number of PSYC 565 to PSYC 401, so that it is the same level as its cross-listed counterpart. Additionally, change the course delivery to online.

RUSS-520 Russian Modernism Arts and Sciences New Course
Description:
An introduction to Russian short stories and essays by Russian writers from the nineteenth century to the twenty-first century.

Justification:
The department has successfully offered this course several times as a special topics course and would like to continue offering it. As such, we would like to assign an official and permanent course number to it.

RUSS-520 Russian Folklore & Fairy Tales Arts and Sciences New Course
Description:
An introduction to Russian fairy tales and other genres of folklore, both in their original form within an oral tradition and as reworked in Russian art and literature.

Justification:
The department has successfully offered this course several times as a special topics course and would like to continue offering it. As such, we would like to assign an official and permanent course number to it.

RUSS-520 Medieval Russian Culture Arts and Sciences New Course
Description:
An introduction to the culture of medieval Russia through its written records, folklore, icons, and ancient religious chant.

Justification:
The department has successfully offered this course several times as a special topics course and would like to continue offering it. As such, we would like to assign an official and permanent course number to it.

RUSS-530 Homer in Russia

Description:
An examination of the influence of Homer’s epic poems The Iliad and The Odyssey on Russian culture, as seen in works by Russian writers including Tolstoy, Pasternak, and Brodsky.

Justification:
The department has successfully offered this course several times as a special topics course and would like to continue offering it. As such, we would like to assign an official and permanent course number to it.

RUSS-540 Writing Russian Nat'l Identity

Description:
An examination of Russian writers reflecting on Russian national identity, including Solzhenitsyn, Dostoevsky, and Grossman.

Justification:
The department has successfully offered this course several times as a special topics course and would like to continue offering it. As such, we would like to assign an official and permanent course number to it.

WGST-381 Gender and Globalization

Description:
Examines the dialectic between globalization and the social construction of gender. Topics include the global assembly line, transnational markets for domestic labor and sex workers, and global feminist alliances. Cross-listed Course: ANTH 381

Justification:
This course was designated a Carolina Core Integrative Requirement course for the Anthropology BA degree and WGST wishes for it to carry this same designation for the Women's and Gender Studies BA. We believe the course satisfies three identifiable Integrative requirements. They are identified below. The course outcomes include those related to the foundational-level requirements for the Values, Ethics, and Social Responsibility (VSR) area of the Carolina Core. These outcomes will be demonstrated through the content of the course including demonstrating understanding of the importance of values, ethics, and social responsibility in developing feminist understandings of gender and globalization; reflection on how values shape gender and globalization; and the role of race, class, gender, and social class in shaping gender and globalization. The course outcomes include those related to the foundational-level requirements for the Effective, Engaged, and Persuasive Communication (CMW-Writing) area of the Carolina Core since the course requires students to write effectively about course content. The course outcomes include those related to the foundational-level requirements for the Effective, Engaged, and Persuasive Communication (CMS-Oral) area of the Carolina Core since the course requires students to speak effectively about course content.

WGST-432 Men and Masculinities

Description:

Justification:
This course proposal aims to correct a missing crosslist. The PSYC 432 Bulletin description correctly lists WGST 432 as its crosslist and provides an updated course

ZZAS-Minor

| Medical Humanities Minor | Arts and Sciences | Terminate Program |

Description:

This proposal seeks to formally add the PSYC 432 crosslist to WGST 432 as well as to bring the course description into alignment. We do note, however, that the current listing for PSYC 432 incorrectly specifies the name of the course as "Men and Masculinity." We will submit a separate PSYC proposal to correct that error.

This proposal also seeks to obtain distributed learning delivery authorization for WGST 432. We will submit a separate proposal to request this same authorization for PSYC 432.

Justification:

The College of Arts and Sciences created a new minor in Medical Humanities and Culture in 2018 that was intended to replace this Medical Humanities minor. It was only recently noticed that the older Medical Humanities minor was still listed in the bulletin. This proposal seeks to officially remove the Medical Humanities minor from the academic bulletin.

Justification:

We are adding the option of SPCH 145 to the current SPCH 140 because we believe it will benefit our students who engage in a lot of online communication as part of their careers.
We are expanding our list of Liberal Arts classes to include lower-level LING courses. There is no reason why those should not be there.

Justification:

We are adding the option of SPCH 145 to the current SPCH 140 because we believe it will benefit our students who engage in a lot of online communication as part of their careers.

We are adding lower-level Linguistics classes to our list of Liberal Arts courses.

We are changing one of the required major courses from "CSCE 205" to "CSCE 205 or CSCE 242" so as to better allow students to tailor the major to their needs.

Justification:

We are adding the option of SPCH 145 to the current SPCH 140 because our students will engage in public online communications throughout most of their careers.

<td>New Course</td>
<td>Description: This course is designed to introduce students to all aspects of live television production of various venue sporting events. Through readings, lectures and hands-on experience, students will learn how major broadcast networks produce live sports events. Justification: Live television rights in the United States were estimated to be worth $22.42 billion in 2019, with hundreds of different television stations and online outlets showing live sporting events. Due to the financial investment from television stations, leagues, and teams (both professional and amateur), the broadcasting of live sports is one of the fastest growing areas in the media world. This class will prepare students to work on live sports broadcasts in a variety of different roles. Students will learn every aspect of a live sports broadcast – from planning, to setting up, to understanding the roles of and the differences between the numerous jobs during a live event, to how to do those various jobs, to the clean up afterwards. Students who complete this class will have the skills that would allow them to work for any live sports production. This course is a key component of the new Sports Media initiative in the School of Journalism and Mass Communications.</td>

Proposed: No change in Pre/Coreqs.

Justification:

This course addresses several curricular needs for SJMC and CIC as a whole and for the Mass Communications sequence:

1. Mass Communications students (and faculty) have expressed the need for more elective courses that are open to them. Likewise, the growth in Mass Communications majors reflects the need for more course offerings housed in that sequence.
2. Many faculty have expressed concern that SJMC students often lack abilities and aptitudes for recognizing and applying cultural analysis; this course addresses that gap.
3. SJMC has zero courses that count for any foundational Carolina Core requirements (and all of CIC only has two). This course provides an option for students to fulfill the Carolina Core’s AU requirement with an SJMC course.
4. As a course that fulfills the Carolina Core’s AU requirement, it invites non-majors who are interested in exploring an upper level SJMC course that has no prerequisites.

Description:

Instruction on how to align social media with business objectives and overall communication strategies; and exploration of how organizations have incorporated social media into various departmental functions. Prerequisite: C or better in all of the following JOUR 291; JOUR 201 or JOUR 202. FS: 12/05/2018. CL: 2020.

Justification:

This has been a course on the books for a while now. This version is to allow for the course to be taught in an online format to accommodate program and student demand.

Description:

Justification:

This administrative edit was requested by SJMC Curriculum Committee and Faculty March 2020.

Description:

Topics addressing contemporary issues in advertising and brand communications. Topics may change from term to term. May be repeated for credit with different topics.

Justification:

The SJMC has the enviable challenge of a growing number of majors and a forward-looking curriculum that must effectively accommodate an ever-changing media and communications landscape. The availability of this course will enable students to better stay on schedule as they progress toward graduation and give the School critical flexibility needed to prepare our students to join the workforce and take their place in society.

Description:

This course provides an introduction to and overview of issues and practices in media management. You will steep yourself in and become conversant about economic, industrial and societal forces that influence modern media content curation, production and distribution.

Justification:

This course provides students access to innovation and product development concepts in a mass media/communications environment. Student learning involving our Social Media Insights lab is included. This class combines two previous courses (News Management & Broadcast Station Management) that were somewhat outdated and removed from the books in the 2019-20 academic year. Core concepts have been combined and extended to include modern media management issues. Although built around concepts of innovation in newsroom environments, it applies to a wide array of mass mediated/communication environments.
