

Hannah Augsbach Lamma serves as the Student Body Treasurer. She is a second-year International Business and Accounting major, with a minor in Spanish from Marlboro, NJ. She is a second-generation Gamecock and is honored to attend the South Carolina Honors College.

During her time at the University of South Carolina, Hannah has been involved in several campus organizations. She joined the Epsilon Kappa chapter of the Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity her freshman year and served on the philanthropy committee. This grew her passion for mental health advocacy and she later chaired the campus fundraising walk for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. She is also a proud member and the treasurer of the Gamecock Consulting Club.

Within Student Government, Abrianna served as the first Professional Fraternity representative on the Greek Relations committee. In this role she was able to hear concerns and ideas from professional fraternities other than her own. She would love to see this role expand in the next term, now that it is established.

Abrianna is passionate about making sure that all students are able to make the most out of their Carolina experience, in every aspect. She feels that her involvement on campus so far has made her time at Carolina the best it can be. In her role as Student Body Vice President, she plans to streamline these opportunities and resources that the University has to offer directly to the students; highlighting programming initiatives, collaborations with other student organizations, and resources regarding safety and mental health.

She wants to be open ear to hear students' concerns first hand so that she can voice these concerns to the other executive members of Student Government and in turn make concrete changes that directly impact students. She also hopes to bring a social and diverse culture to Student Government, creating an environment where students feel represented and welcomed.
