Covid has struck at a time of relative weakness of the multilateral institutions and high international political polarization. Absent a solid international coordination mechanism, countries have resorted to widely divergent tactics to confront the pandemic, and a battle of the narratives has developed. Drawing from his first hand experience of China, European Union and international relations, CG Michel Gerebtzoff will comment on the geopolitical impact of the crisis on some of the world's key players.

Michel Gerebtzoff is a versatile and resourceful diplomat with a technological background. He has built a singular profile through long-term assignments both as an engineer and a diplomat. He has in-depth knowledge of EU institutions, China, space policy, trade and investment and education.
