

Subject: Scholastic Journalism
Policy Number: S30
Date: April 25, 2003
Revised: December 15, 2008

POLICY:

The School supports scholastic journalism including the South Carolina Scholastic Press Association, the Southern Interscholastic Press Association and the Carolina Journalism Institute which is actually a part of SIPA.

PROCEDURE:

SIPA and SCSPA are housed in the School and use facilities throughout the building for workshops and conventions. They also use campus-wide facilities.

Faculty and/or staff provide leadership for these organizations. The executive director answers directly to the dean. If they are a faculty member in the school, they may also be involved in teaching.

The executive committees for SIPA and SCSPA set policy for both of these organizations. SIPA is a 501c3 non-profit organization.

It is expected that these organizations are financially independent except for office space, equipment and staffing. The College Dean serves as director of SIPA as set forth in its constitution.
