

Sophomores Cece Foreman, Sydney Davis, and Celia Rice cheer at the football homecoming pep rally. "This year's pep rally routine was great because it brought us closer to some of the football players," Rice said. Photo by Ariel Jenkins

Ms. Glenda Brandt greets a student coming into the front office on the first day of school. "Mrs. Glenda is such a sweet lady. Everytime I see her, she has a smile on her face," junior Olivia Baggett said. Photo by Brianna Burt

The senior class dog-piles in the middle of the gym during a pep rally to try and show the most spirit and win the spirit stick. "It was a great relief that the seniors won. It was a great experience; it felt like the seniors really ran the school," senior Logan Wilson said. Photo by Brianna Burt

Juniors Cheyenne Chester and Dakota Whitlock audition for High School Musical. "We were singing about our love," Whitlock said. Photo by Claudia Santillan

constant VARIABLES

New principal, new superintendent, seven new teachers...yet Ms. Glenda's smiling face in the front office never changed. "Mrs. Glenda has such a kind heart. She is one of the most selfless people I have ever met. She and treats everyone as if they were her own children," senior Emily Poss said.

New teammates, new titles, same drive to get the win. "[Cross Country] was different without Dylan and Avery who helped to keep me motivated last year, but this year I found motivation from myself and from Coach Beusse. It turned out to be a great season and it was a lot of fun," senior Brandon Barker said.

Constants and variables were all around. Pieces of tradition continually combined with new variations. Continuing traditions from past years, the senior class chose dress-up themes for each football game. "This year we let the students decide. We chose a few topics each week, and whichever one got the most votes, we chose," Senior Class President McKay Shively said.

andrew
HALFERMALZ

Students never knew when a normal day of science could turn unusual. Freshman Jack Pharris cringes as a spider walks up his sweatshirt. "I was in Mrs. Hendrix's class and she wanted us to see the spider, so I let it walk on me. I felt electrified with it on me," Pharris said.

Photo by Savanna Kennedy

theme
OPENING 3