

VERY Merry CHRISTMAS

Theatre students perform annual Christmas play

Starting off the holiday season right, theatre students spread the Christmas cheer with their annual Christmas play. Theatre students auditioned to be in the Charlie Brown Christmas play at the end of August. They had to sing a song and perform a monologue. Roles were announced, and sophomore Daniel Dyer received the lead role as Charlie Brown. However, junior Logan Mims had the chance to play the leading role in one show.

"At first, I was really shocked. The reason I tried out was because my sister wanted me to. I wanted to be a smaller role, because I don't like being in the lime light or center of attention," sophomore Daniel Dyer said.

Every day, the students practiced in their advanced theatre class during fourth block. There were after school practices to make sure everything was right. Student director, senior Eugenia No, helped the students with their lines and the freezes for each scene.

"It was fun being the student director, but it was not my first show directing. It was hard getting the show off the ground because of new people starting in advanced theatre. My job was to give input to Ms. Ryan," No said.

The Charlie Brown Christmas cast performed the play on Nov. 21 and 22 in the school cafeteria. The students had three shows in total during the weekend. On Nov. 22, theatre students worked at the vendor shop hosted at the school before their first show of the day.

"It was my first play here and it was really fun. I'm much better at acting like a kid than being serious, so I'm glad I was in Charlie Brown," senior Hannah Beck said.
