

SITTING PRETTY IN PINK

Cheer, PALS combine fundraising forces to raise $1,200 for breast-cancer research

1. Journalism teacher Dave Winter is pied by Shield co-editor-in-chief Rachel Wolloben on Friday. "Three of my favorite people on the campus pied me, and Pink Week is one of my favorite weeks of the school year, so it was awesome." Winter said. Photo by Madison Olsen.

2. At the football game on Friday night, Alex Julian rushed for three of the 10 touchdowns that the Knights scored as they cruised to a 70-0 win over Lanier. Photo by Adrian Peña.

3. At the Pink Week pep rally, Principal Mike Garrison receives a pie to the face from Alana Raper and Sacco Fernandez. "I loved getting to pie Mr. Garrison because he has such a good relationship with students," Fernandez said. "It was more like hitting your friend with a pie rather than the principal." Photo by Greg James.

4. Football players Nathan Reed and Andre Blakemore talk pregame with Bryn Lewis and Coach Kevin Schneider. Photo by Amurri Davis.

5. PALS adviser Richard Cowles holds PAL Eric Laware still as they are both pegged by water balloons to raise money for breast cancer. Photo by Madison Olsen.

6. Officer Mike Reilly dumps a bucket of water on Officer Tony Andrew Friday during the shooting PAL-ery. "People got really into it because everyone wants to be involved in pink week," Senior Ta'lyana Jammer said. "A lot of money was raised because of that." Photo by Madison Olsen.