FOCUS  |  Table Talk Series Pilot: SUCCESS!
Doug deHoll, MD (’97) speaks with four MIII students about orthopedics/sports medicine.

Lauren Matthews, MD, FAAP (’13) discusses the ins and outs of pediatrics with an interested student in a very intimate setting.

We finally got our Table Talk program off the ground and connected three alumni with a group of MIII students interested in their specialties of emergency medicine, orthopedics/sports medicine, and pediatrics. Doug deHoll, MD (’97/ortho) and Lauren Matthews, MD, FAAP (’13/peds) met in-person at the home of SOMC MD grads, Jason (’03) and Leigh (’01) Hawn, while Ta-Tanisha Favor, MD (’06/EM) met virtually with a group of students via Zoom.

When brainstorming the program with the Student Alumni Council (SAC) over the last year, it was very important that these Table Talk groups remain small and intimate to facilitate meaningful conversations and deeper connections. Initial feedback we received showed that both the students and the Table Talk hosts enjoyed this experience and found it extremely valuable, so we've made the decision to expand the program to occur more frequently throughout the year and roll out specific Table Talks for graduate programs as well.

Alkeiver Cannon, PhD (’22) recently began her postdoctoral research fellowship at Brigham and Women’s Hospital and Harvard Medical School where she’s exploring clinically relevant microRNAs as potential therapeutic targets for multiple sclerosis (MS). Given the increased susceptibility of women to MS, she is also investigating how microRNAs are involved in gender differences.

Gabrielle Rhinehart, MD (’20) will begin her cardiology fellowship in July 2023 at Prisma Health Midlands after completing her internal medicine residency at Prisma as well. Her family is thrilled that she chose to pursue both her residency and fellowship in the same programs and hospital as her father and 1991 alumnus, Rodney Rhinehart, MD.

Barry Shephard, MD (’87) was named Director of a new Lung Cancer Program at Mercy Medical Center Merced in Merced, CA, an underserved area of the California Central Valley.

Alex Walters, MD (’18) completed his ophthalmology residency at Oregon Health & Sciences University in Portland, OR. Alex, his wife Hannah, and one-year-old Heidi Walters relocated to Asheville, NC, where Alex will practice comprehensive ophthalmology at Asheville Eye Associates.

Richard Wilson, MNA, CRNA (’06) authored a chapter of a textbook that is used as a primary resource across many nurse anesthesia programs in the nation. The 7th edition of Nurse Anesthesia features his work in chapter 22 titled, "Blood and Blood Component Therapy."
