Our College of Nursing looks quite different today than it did five or six years ago. Our physical infrastructure has been refreshed, our technology and learning spaces have advanced, our “village” has expanded in quantity and expertise, and our quality and successes continue to soar. In light of these changes, our team has invested considerable time, passion and energy over the past year to reflect, discuss, and create a roadmap for our future. We started the strategic planning process with our core values, which are the essence of our identity and beliefs. These values then shaped our new vision and mission, and areas for strategic focus.

I invite you to take a few minutes learning about our vision for the University of South Carolina’s College of Nursing “to be a preeminent College of Nursing of distinction that pioneers innovation, leadership, and excellence.” We intentionally focus on five strategic areas for our future: people and environment; education; research and scholarship; practice; and leadership and partnerships.

Our future is bright, and we will continue to seize on the endless opportunities for the University of South Carolina’s College of Nursing to meet our mission as we “provide nationally recognized educational programs and advance science, practice, and policy to optimize health for all.”

I hope you will join us as we continue this journey.
